Hitler Bares New Nazi Aims In Speech Today

BERLIN HOLDS SPOTLIGHT IN 'WAR OF WORDS'

ANXIETY GRIPS EUROPE

Colonial Demands, Support for Il Duce, Comment on U. S. Possible Topics.

(By Associated Press)

An armed, anxious Europe looked today to Adolf Hitler for a clue to how he intends to use Nazi Germany's great power.

The world spotlight shone on the stage of the Kroll Opera House in Berlin where the Reichfuehrer will crown sixth anniversary celebrations of Nazi rule in a speech to the first reichstag of greater Germany at 8 p. m. (2 p. m. Mansfield time) tonight.

Tomorrow, in London, British Prime Minister Chamberlain will face a foreign affairs debate in the house of commons, probably on what Hitler says today.

Duce Talks Wednesday.

In Rome, Wednesday, Italian Premier Mussolini will add his voice to the "war of words" that may foretell Europe's future.

As Germany proudly and triumphantly began the seventh year of Nazidom with speeches, blaring bands and flying colors, many wondered:

Will Hitler raise Germany's colonial claims more strongly than ever? Will he back Il Duce in territorial claims on France? Will he discuss strained German-American relations?

So vital was Hitler's address considered to the shaky European peace framework that Chamberlain delayed writing his own parliamentary speech until he could hear it.

Behind Europe's uneasiness was Spain where Generalissimo Francisco Franco's insurgent forces struck from three directions on new government lines and predicted they would complete the conquest of Catalonia within two weeks.

CALLS MARRIOTT

Plymouth Mayor to Seek Aid in Shortage Inquiry.

Mayor J. T. Gaskell of Plymouth, said today he would ask County Prosecutor G. W. Marriott to aid in an investigation of alleged discrepancies totaling $2,772 in the accounts of Clerk A. F. Marvin of Plymouth, reported by the state examiners following an audit of Marvin's books.

Mayor Gaskell said he would confer with the prosecutor Tuesday regarding the reported shortages, but added that no action would be taken against the Plymouth clerk until the status of the alleged shortages and discrepancies is known.

Indicating that Marvin would be given an opportunity to make up the shortages, Mayor Gaskell said he believed the findings against Marvin "were far too high."

Most of the findings, State Examiner Charles W. Corbin said involved Marvin's apparent failure to record collections from the village's users of electricity and water in the clerk's account books. Corbin said the clerk, who has held office for six years, admitted using some of the funds.

WOMAN KILLED

Fatally Injured in Crash Involving Galion Man's Truck.

MARION — (AP) — Mrs. William Mackling, 70, of Sycamore, was injured fatally today when an automobile in which she rode with her husband collided with a truck driven by Paul Walcott, 39, of Galion. Walcott escaped with slight hurts. Mackling was injured seriously.

Moves To New Post

WILLIAM K. MACKEY

MACKEY GIVEN NEW STATE JOB

Put in Charge of All Parole Work as Sherwood Ousts Haslop From Post.

William K. Mackey, former chaplain at Mansfield reformatory, and for the past year general Ohio parole agent, today moved up to the head of what has been in the past the division of probation and parole.

Dispatches from Columbus today said Welfare Director Charles Sherwood had abolished the position of chief of the division of probation and parole, held by Charles G. Haslop, Newark, and had turned the duties of the position over to Mackey.

Sherwood's action puts Mackey in charge of all parole and probation work in the state.

Mackey's salary was increased from $3,600 to $4,000 per year. Haslop had been receiving $5,000 per year.

Haslop named Mackey to the position of general parole agent in January, 1938. Mackey had been chaplain of the reformatory for seven years, and had been interested in parole work.

In addition to abolishing Haslop's position, Sherwood also announced the discharge of 78 employes in the welfare department, dispatches to The News-Journal said.

"And this is far from the end," Sherwood announced.

While Mackey moved up to a new job, another former Mansfielder who had been reported to be a leading candidate for an important state post, lost out.

Gov. John W. Bricker today announced the appointment of Dr. R. H. Markwith, 44, Summit county health director, to the post of state health director. He will succeed Dr. Walter H. Hartung of Toledo.

Dr. Millard C. Hanson, Toledo, formerly Mansfield health commissioner, had been reported as a

LUCKY BOUNCE

110-Mile Ride Jolts Youth's Vertebrae Back In Place.

FRENCH LICK, Ind. — (AP) — While practicing high jumping, Clarence McDonald fell and dislocated several vertebrae.

A doctor made an x-ray examination and ordered him to an Indianapolis hospital.

When he arrived there, a physician found he was all right. The 110-mile ride apparently had jolted the vertebrae back in place.

TVA'S POWER POLICY UPHELD IN HIGH COURT

Decision Turns Back Challenge of Constitutionality by 14 Private Companies.

ROBERTS READS DECISION

McReynolds, Butler Dissent, Claim Ruling 'Goes Too Far'; Reed Takes No Part.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON — The supreme court turned back today a challenge by 14 private power companies of the constitutionality of the power program of the Tennessee Valley Authority.

The decision was by a 5-2 vote.

In a decision delivered by Justice Roberts, the tribunal held that the utilities held no "standing to maintain the suit."

This decision enabled the government to continue construction of a series of dams in the Tennessee valley and sell surplus power produced.

Two Justices Dissent.

Justice Reed did not participate in the decision. As solicitor general he had argued a previous TVA case before the tribunal.

At the time the court considered the case, it had only eight members, due to the death of Justice Cardozo.

Before the TVA decision was handed down today, a solemn ceremony made Vienna-born Felix Frankfurter a member of the supreme court, succeeding Mr. Cardozo.

In the seclusion of an antechamber of the marble court building, the new jurist took an oath to support the constitution.

Packed Courtroom.

Thus the 56-year-old Harvard law professor, who came to this country as a 12-year-old Austrian immigrant unable to speak a word of English, took a seat on the nation's highest tribunal.

NEARS WIND-UP

18-Months-Long Weirton Steel Hearing Approaches End.

PITTSBURGH — (AP) — The 18-month-long hearing by the National Labor Relations board into charges of unfair labor practices against the Weirton Steel company slowly approached a close today.

Only the completion of sur-rebuttal arguments by company attorneys remained before the close of the hearing, probably the longest in labor board history.

Nearly 40,000 ages of record copy have been taken and 772 witnesses have appeared.

The decision in the case is expected to be announced several months hence by the labor board in Washington.

It's Happy Day For Boys From No. 2 Station — They're Moving

The eight firemen of company No. 2, who have been quartered there for the past four months were as excited as a small boy preparing for a summer vacation on the farm.

The reason—They are moving into the new No. 2 station which has just been completed on North Main street, north of the Erie railroad.

They are going into a new modern, steam heated building, complete with an office and a dormitory equipped with new beds and even innerspring mattresses.

There'll be no more huddling around a coal stove to keep warm nor patching the roof to keep rain water from leaking through and damaging equipment. All that has been remedied by the construction of the new building which replaces the 30-year-old frame structure which was given the city years ago by the Ohio Brass company.

"Yes sir, this is sump'in," Capt. Andy Herring remarked. Capt. Ralph Shively as the two ...veyed the new structure this mo... ing.

"It's sure something to be proud of," was the comment of the boys who were moving their personal effects and other equipment into the one story brick structure that is to be their new home.

The new station, with a 40-foot frontage and 50 feet depth, and of the latest modern design was financed by the issuance of $8,000 in general bonds authorized early last year by city council. Martin Hallabrin was the general contractor.

A Big Day for Both of Them

America's president and Germany's fuehrer have little in common except that each heads a powerful nation. Nevertheless each has a very good reason to celebrate January 30.

AS AMERICA celebrates the birthday of its president, across the ocean followers of Adolf Hitler are celebrating the sixth anniversary of his appointment by the late President Von Hindenburg to the German chancellorship.

Just as Franklin Roosevelt celebrates his anniversary in his own way by taking part in a great humanitarian movement, so the German reichsfuehrer will observe the day in his way. He makes a world-wide broadcast today reviewing the Nazi power, reminding the world that Germany's great military strength is once more among the world's greatest, and probably revealing how he plans to use that might in the future.

While America has seen many revolutionary changes in the past six years, the rise to power of Naziism in the same period has changed the map and history of Europe and the destiny of millions of people.

In those six years Hitler has become the most feared man in the world; he has changed the government of Germany, restored Germany to military power, built a greater Germany by annexing Austria and Czechoslovakia's Sudetenland, and risked another world war.

FIFTY-SEVEN years ago today Franklin Delano Roosevelt was born. The American tradition of presidents born in log cabins is passing and President Roosevelt is of the "new school" for he was born of wealthy parents of aristocratic lineage.

Over the nation today there will be a great series of birthday balls to raise funds for the fight against infantile paralysis, a custom started five years ago, in honor of the nation's chief executive who had staged a gallant and winning fight against the dread disease. Celebrities of the stage and screen are taking part in the benefit balls, many of them going to Washington for the festivities.

Six years in the White House—and probably as strenuous as any that have faced a president since Lincoln—have taken less toll of him than of the men who have preceded him.

Outside of a deeper grey at the temples, there is little change in the president. He is in exceptionally good health and faces each new battle with a zest for conflict.

His regime has brought about many revolutionary changes in the American plan from a social standpoint, and many of the government's most important departments have been set up in the past six years.

Police Use 2-Way Radio First Time

The Mansfield police department today inaugurated its two-way radio communication system.

Two ultra high frequency transmitters were in service in two police cruisers and two others will be ready tonight when the installation is completed.

The five-watt units with a signal strength of 10 miles, consist of a compact power pack which has been installed in the trunk compartment of the squad cars.

Located on the dash is a switch which turns on the transmitters and a pilot light shows that the equipment is working. The officers need only pick up the small hand microphone and a thumb release button establishes contact with a receiver at the station which is tuned to the squad cars frequency.

Few Can Tune In Units.

Police Chief Meade K. Bates pointed out that although many persons have short wave receivers and can tune in on WQFY, the police department's transmitter, it is almost impossible to tune in on the mobile units which operate on a frequency of 30,000 kilocycles.

The new transmitters will augment the present receiving equipment which was installed in the cruisers three years ago and are tuned to the 50-watt transmitter at headquarters.

The equipment at that time was purchased by funds raised by public subscription but has been maintained by annual appropriations by city council.

The equipment, which is being installed by Morris L. Myers of Portsmouth, was purchased at a cost of $700. The money was raised by public subscription.

Meanwhile Myers has been named in a damage suit filed in common pleas court today by Sheriff E. P. Long who seeks a judgment of $182 in connection with radio equipment, which he says Myers contracted for but failed to deliver.

The petition filed by the sheriff claims that he advanced Myers $200 in July, 1936, for short wave receiving equipment for Long's personal use which he has never received. He said that $18 has been returned to him by Myers.

STRUCK BY GALE

80 Fishing Shanties Swept Into Thawing Lake Erie.

PUT-IN-BAY, O.—(U.P.)—Eighty fishing shanties were lost today off Put-In-Bay when the ice broke up in the strong wind that attended a sleet storm, Mayor Henry Fuchs said.

No fishermen were in the shanties at the time, but the property loss of equipment was heavy. Saturday and Sunday over two tons of fish were caught through the ice about the islands in Lake Erie and flown by plane to the markets at Port Clinton.

The ice broke all around the islands and carried the shanties far out into the lake, clearing away the ice bridges between the islands, Mayor Fuchs said.

RAGING STORM REACHES OHIO, SWEEPS EAST

TRAINS COLLIDE, 50 HURT

A blizzard described as the worst of the winter, which paralyzed traffic in the midwest and northwestern Ohio early today, is due to sweep over the rest of Ohio by tonight to end a brief interlude of warm weather and rain which washed away most of Mansfield's coating of ice and snow.

With Chicago, Toledo and other Ohio, Indiana and Illinois cities already snow-logged, weather forecasters predicted heavy snow and high winds would reach Ohio late today, bringing a sharp drop in temperatures.

Drifts from four to six feet high virtually blockaded Chicago as the storm swept in from the west, snarling traffic and causing three elevated train collisions. It was estimated that at least 50 persons were hurt in the crashes.

Snow, Colder Forecast.

The forecast was for snow and much colder tonight and cloudy and colder Tuesday. Temperatures were expected to drop far below freezing in Ohio, and a severe cold wave was predicted for the northern tier of states.

Almost as hard hit was Toledo where street cars were derailed by the snow, automobiles were stalled and train and bus travel delayed. Township schools in the Toledo area were closed today when the snow blocked country roads.

Mansfield weather this afternoon, however, gave little hint that a paralyzing snow storm might be in the offing. The sun broke through a murky sky, and the temperature stood at 41, a gain of three degrees in less than two hours.

Sweeps In From West.

Forecaster C. A. Donnell said that if the storm continued all day at the severity prevalent in midnight the nation's second city might have snow totaling more than the existing record of 19.2 inches in March, 1931, the fall was approximately one foot by 9:30 a. m.

The storm was worst in northern and central Illinois, northern and southern Michigan but spread rapidly northeastward into Pennsylvania and New York state.

In Chicago all public and parochial schools were ordered closed. Motor traffic was paralyzed. Only

State's Supreme Court To Decide If Candy's Food

COLUMBUS — (U.P.) — The question of whether candy is a food was put up to the Ohio supreme court today.

The state tax commission appealed to the state's highest court the decision of the Summit county courts that candy is a food and as such is exempted from the three per cent retail sales tax.

Suit was started in the Summit common please court by E. A. Andrews, Cuyahoga Falls confectioner, after the tax commission revoked his vendor's license because he failed to collect a penny tax on 25 cents worth of chocolate peppermints on Dec. 30, 1937.

The license was revoked on the ground that Andrews had wilfully refused to collect the tax. Andrews asked an injunction restraining the tax commission from proceeding with its revocation.

Evidence submitted at the trial included statements from medical men, including the late Royal S. Copeland, former U. S. senator and former health commissioner of New York City, that candy was an important food.

HOLLYWOOD—(U.P.)—Eva Tanguay, 60, famous vaudeville star of pre-war days, again was seriously ill today of complications of anemia and arthritis.

Alone and Only 4, Pepito Toddles to French Haven

Mother Dead Along Barcelona Road, Youngster Keeps Up With Refugees Fleeing to Safety.

By CHARLES S. FOLTZ, Jr.
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

PERPIGNAN, France—Pepito is only four, but he is one among the thousands who crossed mountains in rain and snow to escape the Spanish war, and he has a story to tell.

I came upon him last night at dusk at the foot of a giant peak. He had halted there with the seven other persons he accompanied from Spain.

He was not very clear about his last name. He was just Pepito. His mother died along the road from Barcelona—of hunger, of weariness or perhaps of a wound she had received in the head.

Pepito kept on.

'Just Going to France.'

The women he was with last night said they looked around and there he was, trudging along. When they sat down to rest, Pepito sat down too.

They asked if he were lost.

No, he was not. He was just going to France.

So they brought him along.

Last night he did not know what he was going to do or where he was going.

He was just Pepito, he was only four and he had a soldier's hat that was too big and a watch that wouldn't run.

He was one among the 40,000 French authorities said have pushed into France since Barcelona fell to the insurgents last Thursday.

The French hope that all will return to their Catalonian homes when the danger of further fighting is past, but in the meantime refugee camps are being established.

Soup kitchens rolled up to provide food. Pepito and his friends said they had not eaten for two days.

Officials estimated 10,000 of the refugees were soldiers from the Spanish government army. A few hundred were sent back into Spain yesterday, but they re-crossed the border through the mountains.

STORMS KILL 3

NEW ORLEANS — (AP) — Three deaths, one each in Louisiana, Mississippi and Tennessee, were listed today as the toll of wind and thunderstorms which lashed widely separated sections of the south yesterday.

2 FOUND DEAD

Wife Strangled, Husband Shot to Death in Cincinnati.

CINCINNATI—(INS)—The coroner's report listed a murder and suicide today following discovery of the bodies of Harry A. Menke, 45, jeweler, and his wife, Jennie, 38. The woman had been strangled and the man shot.

Sent to investigate after neighbors reported they had not seen the couple since last Wednesday, a city fireman and detective forced the kitchen window and discovered the bodies.

Partially clad, the couple was found in bed on the second floor. A white cotton cloth was twisted around Mrs. Menke's neck. Menke had a bullet wound in the temple. A .38 calibre revolver from which two shots had been fired was found in the man's hand.

CRASH KILLS 3

Fourth Trainman Injured When Freight Train Cracks Up.

VIENNA, Ill. — (INS) — Three members of the crew were killed and another trainman today was in a Puducah, Ky., hospital as the aftermath of an illinois Central freight train wreck one mile north of Robbs, Ill., last night.

Adolph West of Paducah, Ky., the engineer of the train; Walter Choate, of Reeseville, Ill., fireman; and Simon Waterbury, brakeman whose home address is unknown were killed.

WEINBERG DEAD, TRIAL GOES ON

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK — The spectre of George Weinberg, ailing and fearful one-time gangland "strong-arm" who killed himself yesterday, lingered today over the policy racket trial of Tammany district leader James J. Hines.

District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey announced that Weinberg, on whose shifty testimony he leaned in the miscarried first trial of Hines, still was a witness in the second and that the long transcript of his testimony, although its veracity was doubted by the judge himself, will be read by an assistant prosecutor.

The glowering admitted perjurer and guilty-pleading state's witness against Hines was on the stand three and a half days and at one point in his testimony Hines leaped angrily from the counsel table and shouted: "You lie."

Weinberg was a brother of Bo Weinberg, whose body — he and the rest of gangland believed— was encased in concrete and drop-

Parking Drive Bears Fruit, 'Wide Open Spaces' Appear

The police traffic law enforcement campaign, now in its second week, today had begun to show some definite results in the way of creating parking space.

Streets in the business district, usually lined with parked automobiles, were so clear at noon today that a casual passerby might have thought it was early Sunday morning.

Even around Central park, where by 9 a. m. on an ordinary morning, every parking place is taken looked like the "wide upen spaces" of the west.

The story was practically the same on every other street in the business district, where signs say "Park 30 Minutes." Park avenue west had lots of parking space. So did Main, Walnut and Mulberry streets, as well as Third and Fourth streets on both sides of Main.

Chief reason, perhaps, was the "cycle patrol," which was on duty again today. It made tour after tour of the business section, with Officers C. W. Kyler and George Yoakum chalking tires and tagging cars that parked too long.

At the end of the first week of the enforcement campaign, $105 in traffic fines had been collected, twice as many as last October's total, 34 more than the November total and within 13 of the December collection.

HOLMES COUNTY SHERIFF SUED IN DEATH CASE

$5,000 Asked in Suit Filed After Hospital Patient Dies in Accident.

MILLERSBURG—Frank Oberholtzer, as administrator of the estate of Leonard Oberholtzer, has filed a suit in common pleas court here against Sheriff Harry R. Weiss of Millersburg, Lloyd Troyer of Dundee, Leander Weiss of Barrs Mills and George Weiss of Ragersville, asking judgment for $5,000.

The damages are sought on the contention that the estate of plaintiff's decedent has suffered in the sum of $5,000. The plaintiff states that the decedent died at Pomerene Memorial hospital here July 10, 1937, as the result of an automobile collision on July 8, 1937.

The decedent was a passenger in Weiss' car and was enroute to Massillon State hospital, having been committed there by Probate Judge F. W. Fankhauser, and the car collided with a truck owned by Elmer Fisher of Cleveland, and driven by Ray Sensel of near Winesburg. The accident occurred five miles east of Millersburg on state route 39.

The law firm of Bower, Stafford and Bower of New Philadelphia, represents the plaintiff.

GARDNER FUNERAL TODAY

MILLERSBURG—Funeral services were conducted at the Elliott funeral home here at 2 p. m. today for John Gardner, 85, broom maker since 1930 in this county. Rev. O. F. Wiesmann of New Bedford officiated and burial was in the Oak Hill cemetery here.

Mr. Gardner was born Feb. 10, at Stone Creek. He married Susana Limbach 67 years ago. She died in 1930. He was a member of Salem Reformed church.

GALION'S NLRB HEARING ENDS

A. F. of L., CIO Conflict to Be Taken Under Advisement by Trial Examiner.

GALION—Counsel for both the United Garment Workers of America, Local 147 affiliated with the AFL, and the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, Local 325, CIO affiliate, waived oral argument before Trial Examiner Charles W. Whittemore, when the NLRB hearing closed here Monday afternoon.

The hearing opened seven days ago on a complaint filed with the NLRB by the United Garment Workers to decide if either this union or the Amalgamated would represent the employes of the Stratbury Manufacturing company as collective bargaining agent.

Only a few witnesses were on the stand in the afternoon to help clarify exhibits which were admitted into the records. Arthur A. Miller, attorney for the Amalgamated took the stand at the close of the hearing and told of meeting in Galion in June, 1938, when he and several labor board representatives were investigating the Amalgamated case here.

He stated at that time labor board representatives and other witnesses made no mention of AFL leaders being interested in the investigation. H. A. Bradley, organizer for the AFL who was in charge of the case here assisted by Jesse Gallagher, another organizer, asked Miller "did you expect the United Garment Workers to cooperate with the Amalgamated in working on the case?"

YES, it's possible to borrow to get out of debt. Many people do it every day. They come to Colonial, get cash to pay all their bills, reducing their debts to one obligation, with one monthly payment instead of several.

Here your car (even if not fully paid for) is good security for a loan. Or you may borrow on other personal security—and signature. If you would like smaller payments on your car or other installment accounts we can refinance your balance, reduce your payments, and provide extra cash, too.

When you buy a new or used car, tell your dealer you want to finance it on the liberal, low cost Colonial Plan.

5. EASY TERMS—First payment will not be due for 45 days and then small monthly payments to suit your convenience.
6. LESS COST—Reduced Rates: Cost on amounts over $100 up to $300 is one-third less. Amounts over $300 cost only 8% per annum.
7. ADDITIONAL SAVINGS—10% of the cost is refunded in cash if monthly payment is made promptly.

Freedom of Speech and the Constitution.

SOMETIMES, when "freedom of speech" is being considered, there is an idea among some people that no limitations can be placed on utterances of any sort by anybody.

Such an extreme attitude may be seen in the tolerance accorded alien propagandists and agitators who go about in this country preaching the doctrines of communism, naziism and fascism.

There are now in the United States approximately five million foreign-born people who have taken no steps toward becoming American citizens but who are being accorded privileges obviously intended for native-born or naturalized citizens. Many of these gained entrance illegally but are being undisturbed in criminal pursuits, labor agitation or hell-raising activities in general.

To those who condone or tolerate this alien invasion of trouble-makers and exponents of Hitler, Mussolini or Stalin doctrines, reference is made to the preamble of the United States Constitution, which says:

"We, the people of the United States, in order to form a more perfect union, establish justice, insure domestic tranquility, provide for the common defence, promote the general welfare, and secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and our posterity, do ordain and establish this Constitution for the United States of America."

Note that the Constitution is ordained and established BY the people of the United States and FOR the people of the United States—NOT for alien agitators, malcontents or fanatics of any breed.

"To form a more perfect union . . . to insure domestic tranquility . . . to promote the general welfare . . . to secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and our posterity . . ."

It is under this Constitution that the first article in the Bill of Rights guarantees religious freedom as well as freedom of speech and of the press, also "the right of the people peaceably to assemble and to petition the government for a redress of grievances."

This Constitution, it seems entirely clear, is intended to apply to "we, the people" of the United States, NOT to alien agitators who come here as loyal subjects of their native land—whether Russia, Germany, Italy, or whatever it may be—with ideas that this democracy should be overthrown and their own particular "ism" substituted.

Treason against the United States is defined in the Constitution to include ". . . or in adhering to their enemies, giving them aid and comfort."

Enmity to world democracies has been freely expressed by European dictators. When the spokesmen for these dictators come to the United States to promote the governmental policies of their masters and make claim to the "freedom of speech" vouchsafed American citizens under the Constitution of the United States, the extent to which this "freedom" can be tolerated by citizens of this country without coming dangerously close to treason, may well be regarded as a debatable question.

Such doctrinaries, at best, can scarcely be regarded as tending to advance "a more perfect union, insure domestic tranquility, or secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and our posterity."

It seems timely, in this period of world stress and European turmoil, to reconsecrate the patriotic and liberty-loving spirit of American citizenship to the principles of democracy to which this government is dedicated, and to make it clear to all that here is no place for Russia's Communism, Germany's Naziism or Italy's Fascism—that we earnestly intend to defend and go forward with our own American-ISM.

Miracle Radio Promised.

WONDERFUL developments are promised in the realm of radio. Major Edwin H. Armstrong, professor of electrical engineering in Columbia university, according to an announcement from that institution, has found how to do away with static, tube noises and other interferences, permitting practically perfect transmission and reception.

The nature of the changes he makes in method, principle and instruments will be a mystery to most people, but perhaps this much can be said without scientific inaccuracy. Prof. Armstrong uses a revolutionary principle known as "frequency modulation," instead of the "amplitude modulating system" now in use. It will operate on very short waves, perhaps from ten meters down to one meter, thus opening up 1,000 to 1,500 new wave-lengths.

The receiving sets, he thinks, when produced in quantity, need cost no more than good sets now in use. And the new sets can be made to receive from both the present broadcasting outfits and those built for the new type of transmission.

Japan's Concern Over Guam.

JAPAN seems unduly excited about Guam. It is a valuable island in the western Pacific which belongs to the United States and will continue to belong to us. It has an area of more than 200 square miles, a fertile soil and enough elevation to make life tolerable for white people. There is a good harbor and a circling coral reef. There is a population of nearly 20,000, with a considerable trade between the island and the United States. It is not at all uncivilized, having 30 public schools, with about 4,000 pupils.

Being on a direct route between Hawaii and the Philippines, with which we have a permanent bond whatever their official status may be, Guam is naturally important to America. It is a stepping stone, by water and air, to the East Indies, South China and India. We may or may not feel obliged to build strong fortifications on the island. That depends on the conduct of Japan. It is safe to say that Guam will never bother Japan if Japan doesn't bother Guam.

Luxuries are so soon mistaken for necessities that the idea of a strike of radio entertainers impresses some people as being calamitous.

It would be rather like Hitler to think of sending missionaries into other parts of the world to preach his gospel.

Watching Trends

—By PRESTON GROVER

WASHINGTON—Informed opinion in Supreme Court circles is that Justice Brandeis never will return to the bench from his present illness but on recovering will retire and make way for a new appointee.

To avoid any outright predictions, however, our informants suggest that Brandeis is a man of strong will. And his will for a long time has been to stay on the Supreme Court to a ripe old age such as 90 or thereabouts, so as to rival the service of the late Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes.

Recently he had one bad day on the bench, his illness at that time causing his colleagues evident alarm. Subsequently illness kept him at home. But he has a tough mind and a well tended body and was soon reported out of bed, able to dismiss part of the nursing staff.

Those reporting on him long have predicted that if ever he felt he could not do an adequate portion of the court's work he would retire. He is 82 now, and at 82 illness counts.

Of Religion.

BRIGHT sayings of the statesmen:

President Roosevelt: "Religion, by teaching man his relationship to God, gives the individual a sense of his own dignity and teaches him to respect himself by respecting his neighbors."

Representative Hook of Michigan, defending Attorney General Frank Murphy from attacks of Michigan Republican members: "I believe it is about time, when we enter into political campaigns and when we discuss the record of men in public office, to do so on the issues, presenting them cleanly to the people, so that they can intelligently pass on the issues and stop this scurrilous personal attacks and this scurrilous 'red' baiting that has been going on."

Secretary of Commerce Hopkins: "I do not believe it is one of the functions of the Secretary of Commerce to write economic treatises, although I do have my own views. I have spent six years around here with people who write economic treaties and I don't believe any of them know any more about it than I do."

Senator Johnson of California, in opposing confirmation of Hopkins as Secretary of Commerce: "I know perfectly well that I am here on my feet exerting myself for a cause that is already defeated. I don't care a continental damn because I know I am right."

* * *

Of Democracy.

IRVIN LAUGHLIN, ambassador to Spain 1929-33: "Whatever may come of the present struggle, there never will be a democracy in Spain as we understand it. They have always had a sort of monarchical democracy — every man as good as the king. They will never endure fascism, will never yield to the totalitarian states, which have hurt them as well as helped them."

Button-hole views: President Roosevelt using a long cigaret holder, but not one of the filter variety....Hans Thomsen, fashionably dressed German charge d'affairs, striding alone down a Washington street at night, stops abruptly at a store window — to look at boys' coats....Wrong Way Douglas Corrigan, in a corner of a Washington store autographing copies of his book on the right (not wrong) page... Vice-President Garner patting a senator on the back, probably the 50th pat of the day.

Youth and Jobs.

Twenty per cent of the youngsters of America between the ages of 16 and 24 are unemployed, yells an alarmist. What he doesn't tell is that 20 per cent of all ages in this country are unemployed. That's a horse of another color.

It isn't fair nor wise to single out youth by misstatements. The youngsters have been called "the forgotten generation" by so many agitators that many of the boys have come to believe it and are pitying themselves.

If 20 per cent of the youth are jobless, then 80 per cent must be gainfully employed. That's seeing the doughnut instead of the hole, and it's encouraging rather than the contrary.

When the soap-box orator cries that there are no idle youngsters in Germany and Italy, he should add that the army grabs them at the cradle.

NO, ONLY THE APPETIZERS!

How Much Is Debt of 45 Billions?

—By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON, D. C.—William Atherton Du Puy, economist and shark on the subject of currency, coinage and allied problems (one of his books, "Money," is recognized by students of financial exchange as authoritative), sets himself to visualize $45,000,000,000 for this column.

"It's pretty hard," says Du Puy, "to sense the magnitude of only a billion. Forty-five times that much tends to stagger the imagination. My notion has been to express it in something concrete.

"Well, what is Texas worth, considered as a monetary asset? The 'Statistical Abstract' tell us."

"The Abstract,' " continues Bill, "puts Texas' wealth at about nine billions. Of course that isn't a patch on 45 billions.

"We have to include some more states. We have to include Oklahoma, Arkansas, Louisiana, Tennessee, Mississippi, Alabama, Georgia, Florida, both Carolinas and Virginia. This group of commonwealths represent salability, according to the 'Statistical Abstract,' of approximately the desired 45 thousands of millions.

"In other words, if we wanted to pay off a 45 billion dollar indebtedness in a hurry, we'd have to dispose of, under the hammer, a triangle of territory bounded by a line drawn southward from the mouth of the Potomac to the Gulf of Mexico, westwardly along the Gulf coast to the Rio Grande, including Texas, and back home again northeasterly to the Potomac once more.

"About one-third of the United States!"

Du Puy isn't trying to make any kind of a case against the New Deal's accumulating deficits. He does not contend that it is a perilous national policy. He simply is a statistical fiend, trying to visualize 45 billion dollars.

Maps Are So Deceptive.

News dispatches have much to say about small spots on the map. The Azores? If Germany gains a foothold there, Hitler will be too close to South America for Uncle Sam's safety. Guam? If the U. S. fortifies that islet Japan will be threatened. Various other little oceanic pinpricks are referred to.

It is a temptation to look them up on a chart, to see what the meaning is.

Do not be fooled by a flat map, such as the geographies print. Those maps assume that lines of longitude are exactly parallel—that they are as far apart near the poles as they are at the equator.

As a matter of fact, longitude so-and-so and longitude thus-and-so may be a day's journey apart in an equatorial latitude, and yet one can put one and the same foot down on both of them in such latitudes as Admiral Peary and Lieutenant Shackleton reached in the course of their explorations.

Glance at a flat map, known as "Mercator's projection"—it looks as if Greenland were the size of the United States. Then look at a globe—it is obvious that Greenland is about the size of no more than the U. S. west coast.

Consequently, on a "Mercator" map such strategic points as the Azores and Guam appear in altogether different positions from their real globular ones.

The layman sees the situation as a pancake. The naval expert sees it globularly. The layman needs to examine a globe, not an ordinary "geog'ga'phy," to understand what a navy man is talking about.

Communism vs. Nazi-Fascism.

A reader of mine, who doesn't sign his name, takes exception (politely) to my statement that Communism does not seem to me to have done the damage that Nazi-ism-Fascism has.

I am no Communist.

But Communism took charge in an uncivilized country and didn't, or couldn't, uncivilize it much farther. Nazi-ism and Fascism took charge in two comparatively civilized countries, and UN-civilized them.

Health Advice

Tonics for Fatigue of Aged.

—By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

PHYSICIANS and nurses who are not used to treating elderly persons often are puzzled by a peculiar state of listlessness, and mental confusion, and fatigue. There is a slight temperature and a soreness of the tongue and a general digestive upset.

This condition is well known to specialists in diseases of old age, geriatrics, and is called senile toxemia. The first symptoms usually complained of are weakness, loss of sleep, loss of appetite and lack of strength. Treatment usually is satisfactory. The diet should be maintained whether there is appetite or not. Bitter tonics containing small amounts of nux vomica in gentian compound bring about a rapid restoration.

Contradictions.

In the general care of the aged we meet with very contradictory advice, especially from old people themselves, who are very liable to ascribe their advanced years to some particular thing that they have been doing all their lives. For instance, William Cullen Bryant said:

"I have reached a pretty advanced period of life—78 years and four months — without the usual infirmity of old age. How far this is the effect of my way of life is perhaps uncertain. I arise early, at this time of year about half past five. I immediately, with very little encumbrance of clothing, begin a series of exercises for the most part designed to expand the chest These are performed with dumbbells and pole and horizontal bar. After a full hour of this, I bathe from head to foot. My food is simple—hominy and milk and apples for breakfast. After breakfast I walk to the office of the 'Evening Post,' nearly three miles distant, and after three hours walk home. In the country I am engaged in my literary task until a feeling of weariness drives me out into the open air and I go into my garden and prune the trees or perform other work."

This may have been all right for William Cullen Bryant, but it would certainly kill most of the old people I know. The only conclusion we can reach is that William Cullen Bryant must have been pretty husky to begin with.

This From Franklin.

We also have some advice from Benjamin Franklin:

"It is recorded of Methusalem, who, being the longest liver, may be supposed to have best preserved his health, that he slept always in the open air; for, when he had lived 500 years an angel said to him, 'Arise, Methusalem, and build thee an house, for thou shalt live yet 500 years longer,' but Methusalem answered and said, 'If I am to live but 500 years longer, it is not worth while to build me an house,—I will sleep in the air, as I have been used to do'."

Certainly Methusalem should be the best authority on the care of old age, but one wonders whether Benjamin Franklin spoke for him or not. This advice is certainly contrary to what we previously said, that the elderly should be protected against draughts and changes of temperature.

Perhaps one conclusion to the question of the care of the aged is to let them do what they want to do, because they are probably going to do it anyway.

Daily Bible Thought

WISE EVALUATION: What things were gain to me, those I counted loss for Christ. Listen, World!

I Refuse to Be "A Little Girl at Heart."

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

"If you are just a little girl at heart, you are going to be in a dither about little girl dresses and coats this spring."

THE above is a fashion note. Dorothy MacDonald, who wrote it, is a grand gal and a swell columnist — and her memo is merely one of thousands which announce that the Little Girl Clothes Era is upon us. But I hereby serve notice to Dorothy and all her sister editors that anyone who tries to make "a little girl at heart" outta me this spring, had better bring along their accident insurance.

Nor is my revulsion to the notion merely due to the fact that I have the general heft and heaveho of a boss stevedore. If I were lanky as Garbo and as limp as Zazu Pitts I'd still develop dementia praecox at the very thought of going Girly-Girly in my wardrobe. For it isn't just a matter of prejudice with me . . . or waistline . . . it's a matter of Principle — as I'll presently explain. In the meanwhile if you think I'm just funning, I hereby serve warning to all persons who may be in any way connected with my 1939 career, that—

I do NOT want to look younger than my years! And Heaven help anyone who tries to make me "do so"!

I am 55 years of age—and I look every minute of them—plus a few minutes that weren't recorded on the calendar. But I'm not kicking. Nor trying to hide the fact. It cost me considerable to accumulate these gray hairs and wrinkles—and I admit they'll never qualify for any Earl Carroll shin show. But I, personally, am satisfied with the results and content to live with them. In fact, I'd feel daggoned silly trying to live with anything else.

Can you Frinstance, imagine me, with my acreage and general line of conversation, bounding around in one of those little Girl Play Suits . . . consisting of three inches of bandana handkerchief and ten yards of self-control? No you can't — and Mr. Hays will catch you if you try. Or can you conceive of me going dirndl (which, in case you don't know, Boys, is a dress not a disease—though I admit the effect is practically the same) and toddling hither 'n' yon arrayed in half socks, baby sandals and spit curls? I repeat, you can't—and what's more, you WON'T. Not if it's the last costume on earth.

For, thanks be, I both am and look a full-grown American woman, wife and mother—and glory in the fact. And should think that all other mature females would do the same. But do they? They do NOT! If you don't believe, drop in on any spring fashion show and take a peek at the mobs of old battle-axes who should have given up the struggle at least twenty years ago and eased their aching bunions in the veranda rocker. Instead of which they're being Wistful Girlies down at Waikiki . . . in Betty Boo flounces . . . and hats, so help me, Mabel, they musta stolen from some organ grinder's monkey!

Which, sez I, is carrying a joke too far—just about 50 years too far. It's one thing to appear young and charming. But this increasing notion that no femme should dress or act a day over 16 . . . and that all signs of maternal tendencies should be rigorously camouflaged as symptoms of leprosy or paresis rouses my ire.

Believe it or not, sisters, this nation of ours was founded and is still being maintained by Mothers . . . deep-breasted, wide-hipped, warm-hearted Mothers who were and are mighty proud of the fact and would slap the ears of any Parisian smarty who suggested a dirndl to them! They may not be scenic . . . and as Village Cut-ups they'll never classify. But the most famous heads in history have not disdained to rest their weariness and sob out their sting of failure on their ample shoulders—

Everyday Poem

—By GEORGE ELLISTON

Forgive and Forget.

Do not cherish hatred long,
Clear your mind of it
Thoroughly, so that there is

Do not hug a grudge and fan
It into a flame
Every now and then, refuse
Anger's very name.

He who willfully keeps hate
Has a mental quirk,
Dangers for his own mind in
This procedure lurk.

Throw out hatred from your heart
Cleanly, do not let
Any part remain. Throw out
Hatred, then forget.

A Farmer's Diary

Little Black Sheep.

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

I VISITED a farmer north some distance, who has much rough pasture, suitable for sheep and cattle, and a small portion of farm land which his stock is constantly enriching, until it yields most productively.

As I drove in, he was unhitching his heavy draft team from the bob sled, on which was ranked several cords of elm, beech and sugar firewood.

"That team can pull a big load of wood," I said.

"Yes, indeed, and you'd oughta seen the heavy stone they pulled up to the porch the other day. I'll bet it weighed three ton."

He patted one sleek flank affectionately as he drove them to the barn. He had a heater in his water trough, so that the temperature remained around fifty. The horses did not shiver after drinking, although the day was cold. Some of the cattle in the straw shed drank and stood about in comfort. I counted forty yearlings, all Shorthorns.

"What do you think of them?" he asked. "They'll be a year old around April 1. I'm feedin' all they'll eat. Last year I had thirty that averaged a thousand pounds. I got top baby beef prices for them."

"You raise sheep, too, don't you?"

"Come over here."

I followed him to a warm, spacious shed, where 80 ewes were eating clover hay. They turned to look at us, then went back to feeding. In a small compartment nearby, two mother sheep were bedded. They walked in my direction and each stamped her forefoot, meanfully. By the side of one, a day-old lamb was feeding lustily, his woolly, ropelike tail swinging with great rapidity. The other mother had a dark shadow wobbling by her side—a little lamb almost as black as ink. He was older, and gamboled about the stable gleefully. We both laughed.

"When it gets dark in here I can't even see that one," the farmer chuckled. "I like the little rascal, though. He's different from the others."

"He really makes the flock more interesting," said I.

Man About Manhattan

—By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK—There was the flick of an electrician's hand and a white light beat down on the tiny floor with dazzling intensity. So deep was the light that for a moment the floor and the tables encircling the floor appeared to be bathed in frost.

Then a young man stepped out of the shadows. He held out his hand and into it was placed a smaller hand, the hand of a young woman, and together they moved into the spheroid of light and they too became bathed in frost.

This was a most excellent, a most finished dance team. Their names were Estelle and LeRoy. I do not know what the music was saying, because in such moments the names of songs are irrelevant, but I do know that the music was a romantic and extremely fascinating pathway, and they were following it, they were telling a story in dance, and so well did they tell it that time for you and for all the others too ceased to exist.

* * *

THEY told other stories, some of them frivolous and gay, others after the Viennese manner in graceful three-quarter time, yet always they seemed light as swansdown. They seemed to will responses from one another, there was never a show of effort, or of exertion. It all seemed so ridiculously easy.

But behind this perfection lies the gruelling apprenticeship of months and years of bone-wearying work—endless hours in studios, working day after week and week after year. It meant the long, dim trail of small clubs and extra hours for chili con carne money — for small change. It means backtracking across Europe, then back to America, and the first reluctant signs of recognition, from state to state and coast to coast and then to Europe again and back to New York and the big supper clubs and the hotels. That's the dizzy trail ascended by those who would excel in the game of ballroom dancing.

THEY are my favorite dancers and probably they will be yours too after you see them. LeRoy is dark but he is American born and bred, and he weighs 160. Estelle, also dark and also American, weighs 117. But she is lighter than a soap-bubble on the floor.

The last time I saw them was shortly after New Year's at the New Yorker, where they concluded their New York engagements before hurrying south for the winter season. Twice that evening they gave four dances on the Terrace room floor. Earlier in the day, as they do five days a week, they had spent hours at the studios of Alberto Galo, working painstakingly on a new number, one which they will call "coins," because the music for it is a Viennese waltz called "Gold and Silver."

Five afternoons a week of toil in addition to two shows nightly seem a lot of effort. "LeRoy," I told him, "that makes you a loafer. How do you kill all that time on Saturday afternoon, when you don't work?"

"Oh, said LeRoy, "on Saturdays we go to the movies."

CHAPTER XIII.

"What are you going to do, Tuck?" Alix said anxiously.

"What most people do. Buy a house in the country near a river, dig in a garden, go to church on Sunday, and read the books I've been wanting to read." She smiled. "That's exactly what I'm going to do. I want peace. But I did want to hold out a little longer for your sake, child. What the doctor said today will make me walk out on you when your life is in a muddle."

Alix bit into her lip. Tod gone. Now Tuck. She remembered the loneliness of living alone. Four walls and silence except for the ticking of the friendly little clock. No Tuck to prepare delectable dinners and to scold her when she forgot her glass of milk at night. Loneliness again. Back where she started—in a furnished room.

"Oh, I'll be all right, Tuck. I'll spend week-ends with you. The apartment is too big for me so you can take the furniture and I'll find a room. Our lease is up the first of May. We won't have any trouble about that. I can see you digging in a garden, wearing a floppy hat. But don't dig too strenuously because of your heart." She put her arm around Tuck's shoulder. "You've earned it, dear. Take it."

"You'll think about Kurt too much."

"I won't ever stop thinking about him or loving him. But, Tuck, I—I keep thinking the worst things about Tod. My imagination tortures me. I see him—crumpled and dead."

"Nonsense," Tuck said but a shudder went through her.

* * *

During her lunch hour the next day Alix walked up and down the streets that bordered the water front, looking vainly for Tod. If he were in the city, he was here looking for the only work he knew. She stopped and asked a seaman if he knew Tod Barton, but the man only glared stupidly at her and shook his head. Tod was swallowed up again, she thought. Swallowed up among the vast number of men who went to sea. Or else that hideous premonition again—crumpled and dead.

That afternoon Don said, "Nancy went to New York. She's steamed up over something. Hasn't spoken to me for days. She just left a note."

"I've been wondering why I haven't heard from her," Alix said.

Was Nancy angry with her? She wondered if the gossip that she, Alix, was going to marry Don had been the cause of Nancy's going away. She opened her notebook, sick at the thought that perhaps the lie had reached Bernice.

* * *

The chandeliers shed a soft light upon many heads and young bodies and dancing feet. Stags lined one side of the large room, peered over heads, and then elbowed their way through to ask, "Bay I cut, please?"

In the green dress with the belt of gold and the little Juliet cap, Alix's golden sandals moved in rhythm. Eddie danced casually and held her lightly.

"Any objection to the moon, Eddie?"

"Yes. It makes me think of furniture in shop windows and 'Lohengrin' . . . " He grinned and put her head against his shoulder. "It's something to work for—'Lohengrin' and furniture and you in white, Alix. I never thought it would get me like this."

She looked at the flushed young faces around her. Did any of them have brothers who had vanished? Did they love men who didn't love them? Did they face a future in a furnished room? Probably not. They had comfortable homes and kind, indulgent parents. Most of them were still in college.

A voice asked, "May I cut, please?" and she was transferred to another pair of arms.

After that the stag line seemed to concentrate on the only Juliet cap in the room and it was not until midnight that she found Eddie again. He was on the veranda in the moonlight, smoking.

"You're too popular," he said. Then, "What's all this about Tuck's moving? What are you going to do?"

"First, I'm going to help Tuck find her country house. Then I'm going to get a room close to downtown. I can't let her know how I hate to see her leave me."

"And you're going to live alone in a furnished room?"

"I've done it before."

"Alix, you wouldn't . . . . No. Of course you wouldn't . . . You're the kind of girl something big and romantic ought to happen to. Not a thirty-dollar-a-week clerk and a couple of rooms and a week-end honey-moon. But it's there, the offer, I mean, any time you want it."

"Thank you, Eddie. And if I loved you, what you've offered would be big and romantic. Some men offer only a part of themselves and their possessions. You've offered everything."

Looking out over the spacious green lawn where the grass was damp from today's shower and at the little cedar bushes straight and green in the moonlight, she said, "I'm in love with Kurt, Eddie. Didn't you guess? I have been since the first night I met him."

"Kurt!"

"Yes. And he loves Gina Rowland, the actress. I suppose you know that." She put her arm through his. "Let's go in and dance some more. This is the first night I've danced in weeks."

He caught her hand. "And that's why you wouldn't marry Don Lawrence if he tied the world up in a package and gave it to you. I like you for it, Alix." But he hoped and would continue hoping . . . he'd get another and another five-dollar raise . . .

"Did you see her? The girl who just went out? That's the girl Don Lawrence . . .

Alix did not wait to hear more but went downstairs where Eddie was waiting.

Sitting beside him in the shabby little roadster, she said, "They're still at it—linking my name with Don's. I heard myself discussed a few minutes ago. But they're in for a surprise when they find out it's somebody else. I keep thinking how amused and pleased with himself he looked when I asked him about it." But the rumor troubled her.

Tuck had left a note on the table. "Kurt called," she had written. "He's giving a party for Gina Rowland. I wrote the date on the telephone pad. If I were you. I'd go just to annoy her. Don't forget your glass of milk. Who is going to remind you when I'm not here?"

* * *

Tuck found "her" house the next day. It was a white bungalow with green shutters built on a hill overlooking the river. Tall trees shaded the house and a smooth green lawn rolled down to the shore. On one side of the living-room were three delightful windows and in the basement was a club room paneled in maple.

"I like this," Tuck said emphatically, standing in the center of the empty living-room with her hands on her broad hips. "I didn't want a new house. I wanted a house where people had lived and where children had played. A new house is an inexperienced house. This suits me fine."

That night Eddie called. "There's a room for rent across the street from me, Alix. I'll come out and get you. I'd like you for a neighbor.

Mrs. Bishop, the landlady of the gaunt three-story house, was a tall spare woman with a thin, hard face. Looking at them critically, she ushered Tuck, Eddie and Alix to a second-floor front room with hideous wallpaper and furniture badly mistreated by its former tenant. Cigarette burns scarred the desk. Dark blue shades at the windows added to the gloom.

"I won't hold it," she said sharply. "You'll have to take it now."

Too tired to care, Alix paid a week's rent and told her she would move in sometime the following week.

A letter postmarked from New York lay on her desk the following morning. She went to the dressing-room to read it.

Nancy wrote, "I left town, Alix, because of what I've been hearing about you and my father. How could you humiliate Mother and me like this! I didn't face father with it. I couldn't! There'd have been a ghastly scene and I hate scenes. You don't love him. You love Kurt. You told me that. Then you can't blame us for thinking that you want to marry father for his money.

"We didn't want to believe it but every one says it's true. And we thought you were our friend Father is free. We know that. Free to marry. It hurts me to think that a friendship that meant so much to me can't be any longer. Any explanation would be useless. There just isn't any. You are going to marry father because you can't have Kurt. It's very simple. This has made mother and me realize that you were a false friend from the very beginning."

Alix felt as if she had been struck. Reading it again, she could scarcely believe what she saw. It was written on plain note paper and Nancy had written no address. There was nothing to do but wait until she returned.

When she went back to the office, Sally said, "The boss went to Chicago last night. Business. She scoffed gaily, "Another blond probably."

WINTER BRINGS HEALTH HAZARDS

By John C. Davis, Druggist

At the season of the year when children need all their energy, good spirits and intelligence, to employ in school and the business of acquiring an education, there is a constant menace to their health.

Moving continually from warm rooms at home and at school into the uncertain temperatures of winter days, they are more open to hazards of health than at any other time.

A doctor's examination should be a matter of course. Perhaps your children can stand the ravages of winter days and constant change in temperatures. If so, it will relieve your mind to know that fact. If they cannot, you should know that too.

Check frequently with the doctor. Follow his advice in the matter of habits and health. Take all prescriptions to a good druggist.

Spring In North, Winter In South Require Clothes

Some of the coats in midseason and advance spring collections have skirts full enough to go by with a swish. Robert Piguet of Paris makes this one of beige wool and belts it, under straps, with smooth rust colored calf. The beige straw turban is trimmed with twists of heavy rust colored cord.

Some of the new swim suits for southern surfs are made entirely of rubber. This white one, stamped with a pattern to make it resemble fabric, is cut on slim lines, finished with a lacy Victorian edge and accented with pastel anemones. The straps are made adjustable by means of button snaps.

For Quick Cough Relief, Mix This at Home

Saves You Much Money, and It's So Easily Mixed.

Here's an old home remedy your mother used, but, for real results, it is still one of the most effective and dependable, for coughs due to colds. Once tried, you'll swear by it.

It's no trouble. Make a syrup by stirring 2 cups granulated sugar in 1 cup water a few moments until dissolved. No cooking needed—a child could do it.

Now put 2½ ounces of Pinex into a pint bottle, and add your syrup. This gives you a full pint of actually truly splendid cough medicine, and gives you about four times as much for your money. It keeps perfectly, tastes fine, and lasts a family a long time.

And you'll say it's really amazing, for quick action. You can feel it take hold instantly. It loosens the phlegm, soothes the irritated membranes, and helps clear the air passages. No cough remedy, at any price, could be more effective.

Pinex is a compound containing Norway Pine and pulatable guaiacol, in concentrated form, well-known for its prompt action on throat and bronchial membranes. Money refunded if it doesn't please you in every way.

Asks How To Learn To Dance

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Most girls like to dance, and as I am a poor dancer, I have trouble getting dates. I have no sister to teach me, and it puts me out of circulation. When I do take girls to a dance, I do my best, but the next time I ask them they refuse. It's hard on a guy being a wallflower all the time, and I was wondering if you could give me the name of a good dancing school, where I might get the necessary instruction. I noticed in your column, the other evening, that you receive a good many letters from girls who say they have no boy friends. I'd like to get acquainted with some of them.

I have a good job, a late model car. And I'd like to know some nice girls. I'm enclosing my photograph.

T. S.

Please let me repeat that no one is ever introduced through this column. We're glad to advise you about your personal and domestic affairs, what to read, what to wear, the best way of going after a job, help balance your budget, tell you how to get up a Sunday night supper for 16 cents per person. But we never introduce, exchange addresses, or endorse advertisements.

For this reason I cannot give you the name of a dancing school, but with the country full of them, you should have no difficulty in enrolling in a class, and becoming expert in a few weeks. Inquire at the Y. M. C. A. for the name of a good teacher who instructs in ballroom dancing. They'll do much better for you than a sister, even if you had one. Thanks for your photograph which you enclose. Yes, you are a near-Robert Taylor; I can't understand your difficulties in making dates.

This may be a help to you: A wife finds it saves labor to mix all foods and batters in her sink, thus keeping tables and floor clean. She puts a dishcloth in bottom of sink under mixing bowl to avoid noise and scratches to sink

Diary of a Fashion Model

By GRACE THORNCLIFFE

With a tight little bodice.

There's a let-down feeling, now that all our friends have gone their various ways. If Bill wouldn't be with me, I'm sure that I would be terribly depresesd. Mother and my father are on their way home. Mother doesn't look too well and I'm a bit worried about her. Bill says that he thinks that all the excitements and goings-on were too much for her and that he is sure she will be all right once she gets back to California. I hope so.

Was talking with Pam before she left and we were planning a big celebration next summer when our parents will celebrate their thirtieth wedding anniversary. Mother was very, very ill at the time of their twenty-fifth anniversary, and during the following summers I was always away. But this summer, what with the Fairs in New York and San Francisco and the fashion events we are planning, I am staying home (thank goodness!), and so we shall all be together for the first time in years. Of course, we can't plan anything definite yet, for we don't know whether we shall have the party here or on the coast. The main thing is that we will all be in the U. S. and so there will be a party, a big one too, if we can manage it.

Now that Pam is working and will earn money, we have decided to each put something away each month for a present and for expenses. Pam and I want to do the affair ourselves without any outside financial assistance.

In the meantime I have plenty to do to put over our cosmetic line. I'll be busy in Florida and Havana until the end of March, I am sure. After that, I don't know. Maybe I'll go to California too, as I know that I will have to visit Chicago, Denver, Minneapolis, St. Louis, Fort Worth, New Orleans and other important cities.

Madame gave me this evening coat, just right for Florida. It is of dark green slipper satin. The tight bodice has four gold buttercup buttons. It dips down in back to a lower waistline, more like a hipyoke. The skirt is fully gathered onto it. The sleeves are folded and puffed into fullness at the shoulders with a tight waist. The wrap is lined in very sheer velvet in yellow buttercup shade.

Marriage Meddlers

By ADELE GARRISON

Continuation of "Married Comrades"

"The dame by the second post," Mary murmured in my ear without moving her lips, and I centered my attention on a slender, smartly dressed woman with the average amount of "good looks" but with what I believed to be a purposely blank expression on her face because of the keenness of her dark eyes.

I gave Mary a private little signal indicating my agreement with her observation, and she spoke again.

"What shall we do?"

"Nothing," I returned in the same manner. "Follow my cue."

She gripped my arm again in token of her comprehension, and I closed the handbag I had been pretending to inspect, and spoke briskly and in much louder tones than I am used to employ. But I knew they would reach the ears of the woman operative who was secretly studying us.

"Mary!" I said peremptorily.

"Yes, Auntie Madge," she returned quickly.

"I've finally found it," I said, "and we mustn't delay any longer. We must get back to the Lansfield as soon as possible and resume our rehearsals. I don't begrudge the time we spent in the country—it's done you a world of good—but now we must get to work. Let's take a taxi immediately."

"We won't have far to go," she retorted, playing up promptly. "Look at 'em lined up yonder!"

A hopeful hovering porter picked up our bags and escorted us to the taxis. We appeared oblivious of the other passengers, but half way to the taxi rank, Mary dropped her handkerchief as if by accident, and while retrieving it sent a searching glance around her.

"That dame's in a taxi right behind us," she reported in an excited whisper. "She must be going to trail us right back to the Lansfield."

"Most probably," I murmured coolly. "It's just what I want her to do. She will report to your father-in-law that we really did get off the South Jersey train at the terminal, and came directly by taxi to the Lansfield."

"What an old fox he is!" she exclaimed with a little expression of disgust. "He must—"

"Better not talk until we're safely inside our own rooms," I whispered quickly.

We halted long enough on our entrance to the Lansfield to see that the woman trailing us dismissed her cab, and with the air of one who has satisfactorily completed a task, gave us a final fleeting glance and walked away from the hotel.

We went straight to the elevator without stopping at the desk, but a bell boy rushed breathlessly up to us just as we were entering the door.

"Long distance calling you, Mrs. Graham," he said.

HOROSCOPE

For Wednesday, February 1.

A VERY active day, with much moving in the direction of high goals, is forecast, judging by the lunar as well as mutual aspects. This positive headway may be made against underhand opposition or fraudulent tactics. The menace of treachery and subtlety also pervades the private relations, calling for vigilance and shrewd manipulation. But real progress in finance and position await.

Those whose birthday it is are on the eve of a year of splendid opportunity for advancement, progress and good fortune. Much may be gained by aggressive and constructive effort, as well as by alertness to plots from undercover sources. This undercurrent of duplicity and deceit may also be found in private, social or sentimental relations. It calls for keen and shrewd although discreet manipulation.

A child born on this day may be capable and ambitious, with much enterprise and versatility. Nevertheless, it may have certain restless or erratic proclivities underlying its really excellent disposition.

To lessen the cooking time for baked custard heat the milk to "smoking" in a double boiler before adding it to the rest of the ingredients.

Time Saving Desserts Suggested

By ALICE LYNN BARRY

If you are like Ferdinand, the charming little bull, who desired plenty of time to smell the sweet flowers, you probably resent long hours spent over the stove in the preparation of dinner. You can have your leisure and your delicious desserts both if you make them of sweetened condensed milk. Pie fillings renowned for their magic smoothness can be mixed in five minutes without going near the stove.

Magic Lemon Prune Pie is a splendid all-year-round dessert but especially good when fresh fruit isn't plentiful in the average locality. The recipe requires 1 1-3 cups (one can) sweetened condensed milk, ¼ cup lemon juice, one cup prune pulp, ½ cup whipping cream, 2 tablespoons confectioners' (4X) sugar and vanilla wafer pie crust. To prepare the prune pulp, drain off liquid, remove pits and force pulp through a coarse strainer. To make the vanilla wafer pie crust used in this and the following recipe, roll enough vanilla wafers to make ¾ cup crumbs. Cut enough vanilla wafers in halves to stand around edge of pie plate and put them in place. Cover bottom of plate with crumbs and fill in spaces between halved wafers. Pour in filling as usual. Now for the lemon prune pie filling: Blend together the sweetened condensed milk and lemon juice. Fold in the prune pulp.

Pour mixture into a 9-inch pie plate lined with vanilla wafer pie crust. Cover with whipped cream sweetened with confectioners' sugar. Chill before serving.

Magic Banana Cream Pie is very, very good. To make it takes the usual 1⅓ cups (one can) sweetened condensed milk, ¼ cup lemon juice, 2 medium sized bananas cut into small piece, ½ cup whipping cream, 2 tablespoons confectioners' sugar and vanilla wafer pie crust. Blend together the milk and the lemon juice. Fold in bananas. Pour into 9-inch pie plate lined with vanilla wafer pie crust. Cover with whipped cream sweetened with confectioners' sugar; then chill.

Glass stoppers from bottles may be removed by taking a piece of twine, doubling and putting it around neck of bottle twice. Have somone hold bottle, then take ends of twine, one in each hand, and work back and forth until the neck of bottle becomes warm. Stopper can then be removed.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

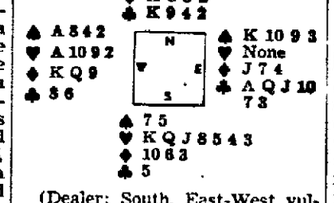
By Shepard Barclay

"The Authority on Authorities"

JUST DON'T DO IT

WITH A NEW PARTNER opposite you, judgment is at a premium to prevent misunderstandings which can cost hundreds of points. If you contemplate making some bid which may be interpreted in any one of several different ways, don't do it unless you have a line on which interpretation he will place upon it.

This is most emphatically true of original suit bids of three, which are used in a wide variety of different ways by good players. With a hand calling for your kind of favorite three bid, don't make it. Pass, unless there is some other bid possible which your partner can understand.



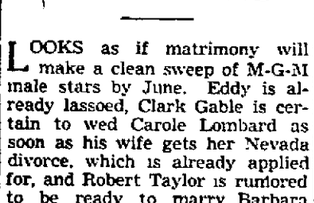
(Dealer: South. East-West vulnerable.)

Here South, playing in a rubber game with a new partner, found himself with just the kind of holding on which he likes to bid three of his long suit—a worthless hand defensively, but one which promises to go down about three tricks if he finds his partner unable to help. If the suit were one card longer, he would bid 4-Hearts on it.

So South started with 3-Hearts. West passed. North, expecting his partner to have a pretty good hand with about an honor trick or so on the side, bid 3-No trump. East passed and South, willing to take not-vulnerable punishment if not doubled, passed also. West, who knew South's kind of three bid, was pleased to double this. South then felt he had to take it out into 4-Hearts, which West doubled.

Seeing a vulnerable game probably lost, East now had the temerity to back in with 4-Spades, which North doubled. Scared to death now, South took it out to 5-Hearts, which West doubled. This was set five tricks, worth 900 points to East and West, who could have made only an ordinary spade game, plus possibly one overtrick.

Tomorrow's Problem.



(Dealer: South. North-South vulnerable.)

Against a lead of the heart J, how should South play for a no trump game?

To prevent shoulder straps slipping off, cut a piece of tape long enough to hold straps. Sew one end of tape to inside of dress on shoulder seam. Then sew one-half of snap fastener onto shoulder seam and the other on the loose end of the tape.

THEATERS

LOOKS as if matrimony will make a clean sweep of M-G-M male stars by June. Eddy is already lassoed, Clark Gable is certain to wed Carole Lombard as soon as his wife gets her Nevada divorce, which is already applied for, and Robert Taylor is rumored to be ready to marry Barbara Stanwyck any time. Only Tyrone Power of all the Hollywood personality males seems skittish. His romance with Annabella, French actress which was front-paged when the two met in South America weeks ago, is reported to be cooling already.

* * *

Thorn Between Roses.

Love among the roses—the roses which provide the mythical kingdom of Pushtalnick with its chief bid to fame—keynotes the latest Bing Crosby comedy "Paris Honeymoon," which will be shown through Wednesday at the Madison. The lovellest rose in the kingdom is Franciska Gaal, and Crosby, as Lucy Lawton, soon finds that he is a thorn between two roses—Shirley Ross being on the other side of him. The picture's songs are very sing-able.

* * *

You-All Is Missing.

Perhaps "Kentucky" is just a forerunner of southern pictures that are to be made without benefit of a you-all accent. Although all of the players—headed by Loretta Young, Richard Greene and Walter Brennan—are southerners from away back, none of them employ a southern accent. The plot excuses Greene's English accent by having him spend years in English schools, but neither Miss Young nor Brennan—who gives a grand performance—make any attempt at an accent. Which is better than a poor attempt, but that soft southern diction when it's good lends considerable to a film. "Kentucky" remains at the Ohio.

* * *

Romance and Finance.

The dynamic Francis Lederer and lovely Madeliene Carrol are teamed in "It's All Yours," one of the two Ritz features for the middle of the week. Lederer plays a thoughtless, extravagant son of a millionaire, with Miss Carroll as the secretary who is willed all of the estate in an attempt to teach the young man a lesson. Romance and finance are interestingly combined. Mischa Auer and Grace Bradley are in the cast. The second film is "Alexander's Ragtime Band."

* * *

Two Re-issues.

For its Wednesday only program the Park presents a re-issue that is still remembered as one of the greatest pictures of its year—"Street Scene." The picture was made from the Pulitzer prize stage play and featured Sylvia Sidney, with such old timers as Estelle Taylor, William Collier, jr., and David Landau. The play by Elmer Rice is an American tragedy of the city streets. Shown with it is a re-issue of Lily Pons picture, "Hitting A New High," in which she is supported by Jack Oakie and Edward Everett Horton.

* * *

Moon and Honeymoon.

A tropic moon ends in a honeymoon for Dorothy Lamour and Ray Millard in "Tropical Holiday," which is a Majestic feature this week. Sharing honors with Miss Lamour's shapely figure is Tito Guizar's voice, Bob Burns' philosophy and Martha Raye's mouth. A bull fight provides considerable comedy. Edward G. Robinson in "A Slight Case of Murder" is a hilarious travesty on modern gangdom.

Isn't This Why You Are Constipated?

What do you eat for breakfast? Coffee, toast, maybe some eggs? What do you eat for lunch and dinner? White bread, meat, potatoes? It's little wonder you're constipated. You probably don't eat enough "bulk." And "bulk" doesn't mean the amount you eat. It's a kind of food that forms a soft "bulky" mass in the intestines and helps a movement. If this is your trouble, may we suggest a crunchy toasted cereal—Kellogg's All-Bran—for breakfast. All-Bran is a natural food, not a medicine—but it's particularly rich in "bulk." Being so, it can help you not only to get regular but to keep regular. You won't have to endure constipation, you can avoid it. Eat All-Bran daily, drink plenty of water, and life will be brighter for you! Made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek.

How To Relieve Misery of Your CHEST COLD

If you are suffering from a miserable chest cold, try this: Massage throat, chest, and back with Vicks VapoRub at bedtime. Then spread a thick layer on chest and cover with warmed cloth. VapoRub goes right to work to bring relief—two ways at once. (1) Direct through the skin like a poultice; (2) Direct to the irritated air-passages with its medicated vapors. This poultice-vapor action loosens phlegm—clears air-passages—checks tendency to cough—relieves local congestion. Often, by morning the worst of the cold is over. VICKS VAPORUB

BUYER'S INCOME SHOULD GAUGE HOME BUILDING

Excessive Monthly Payments Discouraged by FHA; Loan Plan Explained.

In buying a home under the Federal Housing Administration Insured Mortgage Plan, the first step is to decide how much one can afford to invest, according to FHA officials.

Generally speaking, a home buyer's income should be at least four or five times the amount of the monthly loan payment. In other words, the total home investment should not be more than two or two and one-half times the borrower's annual income.

Decision as to the type of home best suited to the buyer's needs is the next step in the procedure. Careful thought should be given on the number of rooms required, location, etc. FHA officials point out that consultation with a local architect, builder, or real estate firm is a wise step at this juncture. Practical suggestions which will help clarify the individual's ideas will be forthcoming.

The borrower, after a rough plan and a tentative estimate are prepared, should then apply for a Federal Housing Administration Insured mortgage at any approved lending institution. Such institutions are located in every state in the Union and in most communities.

Federal Housing Administration officials point out that the amount of the loan sought, repayment period, charges, and other specific details of the transaction are matters which are arranged between the borrower and the lender, but the lender must be guided by FHA limits. Top interest charges are 5 per cent, plus one-fourth or one-half of 1 per cent for the annual mortgage-insurance premium.

The down payment does not necessarily have to be paid in cash, FHA officials say. A building lot may be accepted as all or part of the down payment.

At the time the loan is made the borrower will be asked to provide funds for the first year's taxes, assessments, and fire insurance.

A CANOPY PLAN

To give a flare to your bedroom add a small wall canopy directly over the bed. If your furniture is of some natural finish wood, introduce one or more painted pieces done in some one of the newer subdued pastels such as slate blue, dusty pink or Hawaiian green. Select some color outstanding in your drapery or bedspread pattern and match it with a painted dressing or bedside table.

MOTH-REPELLANT PAINT

Paints with moth-repellant qualities due to powdered cedar wood are growing in popularity. These, of course, are intended for use on wardrobes where clothes are hung. Although better results are obtained by using this powdered wood, cedar oil either natural or synthetic, is quite satisfactory. It should be mixed with regular paint in the proportion of 1 per cent cedar leaf oil.

WAX BEAUTIFIES, ACTS AS GUARD

Strange Substance Culled From Far Corners of Earth Good Protection.

WASHINGTON, D. C. — To paraphrase Mr. Shakespeare's line about there being "sermons in stones," there are lessons in leaves about protecting prized household possessions. Have you ever noticed how many trees and shrubs native to warm climates have leaves with a highly glossed upper surface? This waxy coating is for their protection from the weather. Although your floors and furniture are not exposed to outside elements, they do need protection from family wear and tear. And the very best way to obtain this is to emulate Mother Nature and coat them over with wax.

In the host of natural waxes collected and prepared for household use, the one culled from the carnauba palm of Brazil is a ringleader. For a few weeks of the year, that part of Brazil where the carnauba palm grows is flooded with torrential rains. During these storms the palms absorb sufficient water to nourish them throughout the long dry months to follow. To prevent this moisture from being drawn away by the sun's penetrating rays, Nature coats all the delicate plant structures with a thin layer of wax. Accordingly, the palm remains green when all the surrounding vegetation has become brown and dusty.

It is from the leaves that a commercial supply of wax is obtained. These are harvested with a long-handled sickle and are transported to the drying field. Three days of hot sun shrinks the leaf fibres and loosens the wax sheath. The wax beaters first slit the leaves, then pound them with a stick until the wax is removed. The accumulated wax is slowly melted over an open fire and filtered into pans. When hard, it is broken into pieces for shipping to the market.

47 on Trial Today In New Mexico's WPA Conspiracy

RELATIVES OF U. S. SENATOR FACING JURY

Prosecution Charges Accused Trafficked in Jobs for Political Purposes.

(By United Press)

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M.—Senator Dennis Chavez's sister, son-in-law, and 45 other defendants went on trial in federal court today charged with trafficking with Works Progress Administration jobs for political purposes.

Twenty-four other persons will be tried later on the same general charges. Chavez was here and may testify as a defense witness.

The prosecution was instituted by former WPA Administrator Harry L. Hopkins, who last fall summilarly discharged the New Mexico administrator, Fred Healey. Later a federal grand jury indicted Mrs. Anita Tafoya, Chavez' sister, Stanley W. P. Miller, his son-in-law, who was an assistant federal attorney, Chavez' secretary, Joe Martinez, and 68 others.

Face Conspiracy Counts.

Forty-seven persons, including Mrs. Tafoya and Miller, were charged with Overt acts under conspiracy counts. The others were charged with diverting WPA jobs for political purposes and with assessing the wages of WPA workers for political purposes (these latter 24 will be tried later.)

The irregularities were alleged to have taken place in three campaigns: the one which preceded an election on a constitutional amendment on Sept. 21, 1937, to remove the limitation on the governor's tenure to two consecutive, two year terms; an Albuquerque city election; and a fight in the New Mexico legislature to obviate state nominating conventions.

In each contest, Former Gov. Clyde Tingley was on one side and Chavez, Dempsey, and John E. Miles, former Democratic state chairman, who became governor Jan. 10, were on the other. In each case, Tingley and his supporters were defeated. Tingley appointed Chavez to the senate to serve out the term of the late Sen. Bronson Cutting. He subsequently was elected and he and Tingley fell out.

Federal Attorney Everett Grantham, Miller's superior until Miller resigned, charged that the defendants has conspired to build a political machine through their control of the employment and the assignment of WPA workers; that they had required political contributions of the workers; that they had used "force, threats, and intimidation" to compel them to join in political action.

SET UP BOARD

Housing Authority Organizes at Session Today.

The organization meeting of Mansfield's newly created Metropolitan Housing Authority will be held at 4 p. m. today in the office of Mayor Claude M. Hunter.

Mayor Hunter said this morning that he had called the group together for the purpose of electing officers so that they could "stand on their own feet" and that he could "wash" his hands of the details.

Members of the board are P. W. Backenstos, C. N. Shultz, Joseph Scanlon, C. H. Stander, and J. J Charles. Charles was appointed last week by the county commissioners when M. Dale Ward declined the appointment because of ill health.

The board is expected to seek funds from the federal government to finance a proposed $2,000,000 low cost housing project here if congress appropriates more funds for the housing program

WPA FUNDS RUN LOW, CONGRESS HURRIES BILL

Speeds Action on Senate's Amendments So Relief Won't Be Crippled.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON — With WPA funds rapidly dwindling, congressional leaders today planned to speed a conference agreement on the $725,000,000 emergency relief fund bill so that it can be laid on President Roosevelt's desk.

While the senate adopted many amendments to the house measure, house leaders voiced confidence that differences between the two bodies could be ironed out without a prolonged conference.

Unless the measure is passed within the next week, leaders were told, there is danger of complete disruption of the far-flung relief agency.

Might Issue Blast.

President Roosevelt was said to be prepared to sign the bill, but may issue a blast against congress because it slashed the $875,000,000 fund sought by him by $150,000,000.

With both house and senate in agreement on the figure of $725,000,000 to conduct WPA until June 30, chief differences between the two bodies were on anti-politics and pay differential amendments.

Under the bill, as passed by the senate, not more than five per cent of WPA employes may be dropped during February and March. The president is, in effect, invited to seek more money in April if he finds it necessary.

Because of the strong stand taken by Mr. Roosevelt against wholesale slashing of WPA rolls at this time, a second emergency fund may be sought by him within three months.

Senator Hatch (D) Arizona, was hopeful that the house would accept his drastic senate amendments designed to purge relief of politics. The amendments provide a $1,000 fine and year's imprisonment to anyone threatening jobs of WPA workers, or promising a job, for political purposes.

The senate also prohibited solicitation of campaign funds from WPA workers or anyone paid out of federal funds. It tightened up house provisions denying civil service to WPA workers.

A southern coalition planned to fight for retention of the Tarver amendment, inserted by the house, which limited WPA regional pay differentials to 25 per cent. The senate rejected the amendment, and leaders indicated that it would be turned down in conference.

four automobiles crossed the outer drive bridge in five hours. Sections of the lakefront outer drives were closed. Mounted policemen were ordered to keep their horses in the stables.

The elevated crash occurred during the morning rush hour when thousands of commuters were battling the drifts to get to their offices. The most seriously injured passengers were taken to hospitals by motorists who fought through foot-deep snow to rescue the injured.

While some sections dug out of the heaviest snow of the winter, Mansfield and other cities in the state were drenched with more than an inch of rain which flooded basements and sent streams out of their banks.

The fall in Mansfield measured 1.15 inches and followed a light snow which began late Saturday. The heaviest rain fell early today. Temperatures hovered around the freezing mark, with a low of 33 degrees recorded this morning. Yesterday's high was 38.

Heavy fog settled over most of the state last night, and air travel was at a standstill. Columbus had 1.40 inches of rain, and in Cincinnati the fall was 1.28 inches.

As an ice field broke up off Put-In-Bay, fishermen on shore saw 120 unoccupied fishing shanties carried out on the lake by a strong wind which swept the ice floes. Seven of the shanties sank.

Swept out in the lake with them was a small motor boat owned by H. D Bennett, president of the Toledo Scale Co., and owner of Rattlesnake Island.

A heavy northeast wind accompanied by snow and sleet caused much damage to trees and wires at Port Clinton Water in Lake Erie and the Portage river was about five feet higher than normal. Snow banks blocked traffic near Camp Perry.

Fremont reported hazardous traffic conditions as ice snapped branches from trees. Rain, sleet, snow and a high wind whipped Sandusky last night and early today, leaving streets and sidewalks treacherous

FAIL TO ATTRACT BIDDERS

Failing to attract bidders at sheriff's sale Saturday at the courthouse, a 60-acre farm in Sandusky township will be re-appraised and offered again to satisfy a $2.002 foreclosure judgment against Roy E Lohr and others. Appraised at $3,900, the farm must sell for at least two-thirds of the valuation, or $2,600.

Second Semester Of Year Started In Public Schools

Mansfield school children entered the final stretch of the 1938-39 school year as the second semester got underway today.

At Senior high, 152 new students entered the school from John Simpson Junior high school, boosting the school's enrollment to 1,374, according to H. D. Bishop, assistant principal.

addition of the new students did not create an overcrowded condition at the school, Bishop said. These same students have been attending classes in Senior high building for the past three weeks due to the razing of the junior high building, and places had already been provided for them.

Ninety-two students left the school last Friday due to mid-year graduation. About 12 returned today to enroll in post graduate courses.

Mid-year promotion now only affects students at Hedges and John Simpson Junior high and Senior high schools.

Kao, Chinese, who spoke regarding the influence of Christianity upon China as the basis of understanding between China and the United States, and Charles Walker, Negro, who discussed the issues arising from racial discrimination as they related to the Negro.

Members of the forum cabinet served a supper following the program Janet Kelly, Ruth Husung, W. E. Wygant, jr., William Layton, and Henry Sanford were in charge of the supper.

Next week's meeting will be held at the First Presbyterian church, with Dr. Frank H. Maxwell and Dr. W. E. Wygant leading a discussion on "Venereal Diseases."

No Meal Too Big Or Hearty For Her Since Taking Vendol

Mansfield lady says before taking this splendid Root, Herb and Alkaline medicine and getting relief from constipation, that most everything upset her stomach.

"Truly, I wouldn't take anything for the wonderful relief that Vendol has brought me," said Mrs. Bessie M. Adams of 579 Springmill St., the expert Pastry Maker at Max Diner Restaurant, in a statement to the Vendol Man in Central Drug Store, where he daily hears Vendol praised to sky high by some of the most reliable citizens living around here, who tell how it has restored them to full enjoyment of health.

"I allowed myself to become constipated, and this condition lay at the bottom of all my troubles. Got to where most everything I ate nauseated me, turned sour in my stomach, and acid risings burned my throat. I just seemed to ache all over, had no energy and felt dizzy and headachy most all the time I couldn't get restful sleep because of being called out of bed so often to relieve my kidneys

"A number of my friends and neighbors were taking Vendol and I often heard them speak highly of the relief it gave so I got some and also a box of the little Vendol Laxative Tablets and this proved to be one of the wisest things I ever did.

"Gratifying relief from constipation was the first thing I noticed then no meal was too big or hearty for me to eat and enjoy without a moment's distress following. That isn't all I get long hours of restful sleep without a call, and arise every morning ready for my day's work. That tired, worn-out feeling has given way to renewed energy, the pains all over my body have been relieved, and I just feel improved in every way.

"Surely, if Vendol could do this for me, I know it will help everyone suffering like I did, who is willing to give it a trial. That explains why I'm glad to recommend this splendid medicine to them."

MRS. BESSIE M. ADAMS

Don't delay giving this great compound of Nature's Roots and Herbs with Mild Alkalines a chance to help you. It is sold by leading druggists everywhere, and the Vendol Man is daily at Central Drug Store, Cor. Main & Fourth Sts., to explain all about it. So, visit him soon.

ASSEMBLY BACK ON JOB, RELIEF ENACTMENT DUE

First of 'Ripper Bills' to Reorganize Taxing Board to Be Introduced.

(By International News Service)

COLUMBUS—The four-weeks old 93rd general assembly returned to the capital today to pass the $5,000,000 stop gap relief bill, extend the cigaret and liquid fuel taxes and consider various types of reorganization legislation.

First of the 'ripper" bills to hit the hopper this week was expected to be one reorganizing the tax commission and drafted by Sen. Frank E. Whittemore (R-Akron) senate majority leader.

Another was being drafted which would tear down the present parole board and set up a new one, the object being to oust Mrs. Myrna Smith from the $6,000 a year parole board job to which Former Governor Davey appointed her just before he left office.

Work on New Bills.

Meanwhile, several legislators worked on bills which they intend to send to the hoppers before Feb. 13, the bill introduction deadline. Several meritorius measures will never see light.

The senate, which has had little work to do while the house was busy getting legislation moving, has both the relief bill and the tax extender proposals for consideration.

The tax bills have been recommended for passage, but the senate taxation committee was scheduled to work on the relief bill after the 7:30 o'clock session tonight. It was possible that several sections of the relief bill, which was passed by the house last week, will be amended before the senators vote on it.

Far from the cares of state, Governor John W. Bricker was being entertained in Topeka, Kan., awaiting the hour of a Republican dinner tonight when he will be the chief speaker at the party's annual "love feast."

Bricker's arrival was the signal for Former U. S. Senator Henry J. Allen of Kansas to open a one-man boom for Ohio's governor as the party's presidential candidate in 1940.

"Governor Bricker is one of the ablest leaders to come to the front within recent years," Allen said. "He distinguished himself first as assistant attorney general, and later, as attorney general of Ohio.

"It is inevitable that there should be gossip connecting his name with the nomination for the presidency in 1940, since he comes from a state that has furnished so many presidents and is, himself, in every way worthy of consideration."

SUES TOWNSHIP

Railroad Amends Petition in Suit for Bridge Repairs.

Naming the Springfield township trustees as joint defendants with county commissioners, the Pennsylvania Railroad company today had filed an amended petition in common pleas court in its action for repairs of an overhead bridge in Springfield township.

County commissioners, defendants in the original suit filed several weeks ago, denied responsibility for repair of the bridge which was closed as unsafe by the railroad company.

Disputed ownership of the bridge on the Stiving road northwest of Mansfield brought the court action. Both the county and the company denied owning the structure which is said to be 40 years old. The bridge spans the Pennsylvania tracks.

The suit asks the court to require the county or the township to repair and re-open the bridge to traffic.

COPPER WINDS UP TWO-MONTH JOB, REPORTS

Cites Work Done on Temporary Assignment; Hopes to Win Back Place on Force.

Completing a two-months period as assistant county probation officer Saturday, Harry Copper, former Mansfield patrolman, today submitted a report of his activities during the period to Probate Judge C. J. Anderson.

Copper, whose salary was paid during the two months by donations from 10 citizens, said he would not ask to be continued as an officer under the same set-up, but hoped to obtain re-instatement as a police officer.

"I am grateful to those who made it possible for Judge Anderson to employ me in juvenile work for two months, but I don't think it would be fair to ask them to help any longer," Copper said.

Sees Little Chance.

He added that he would continue his efforts to be re-instated to the city police department, but saw little chance for immediate action on his request.

Ten Mansfielders contributed $10 a month each for two months to pay Copper's salary after he was appointed by Judge Anderson.

Judge Anderson said he understood that the McVey post, American Legion, would sponsor a movement for Copper's reinstatement to the police force, but Walter Beckley, post commander, said he knew of no attempts on the part of the Legion in behalf of Copper's campaign. Copper is not a Legion member.

"Members of the post of course can do as they please in the matter, but it is not the custom of the Legion to endorse men for any office," Beckley said.

Lists His Activities.

In his report to Judge Anderson, Copper listed two major juvenile cases which he helped to solve and two other cases which he handled for the police department.

Copper's investigation of reports of minors frequenting night clubs and liquor establishments led Judge Anderson to call six operators into his court for warnings about sale of intoxicants to boys and girls of school age.

Copper's work during the two months brought the arrest and conviction of a colored youth as a purse snatcher and three men for contributing to the delinquency of high school girls.

He also aided in the arrest of two men for robbing the Ringside cafe and four men for stealing dishes and a gun from a parked automobile, the report said. Total property recovered amounted to $100.

Farmer Joe Mott, Friend of Hunters, 'Written Up' Again

Joe Mott, a farmer living near Shelby who has had almost as much publicity as a movie star because of his turning his home and farm into a haven for sportsmen, is the subject of a two-page story in the February issue of the Ohio Conservation Bulletin.

Mott has been "written up" and photographed by newspapers all over the state and is so "camera broke" that he can keep right on talking while the camera's eye is staring at him. His philosophy makes him as hospitable to newsmen as to hunters.

He first attracted attention several years ago by advertising that his farm was open to any hunter. Later, despite increasing numbers, he advertised free dinners as well as free hunting to Ohio nimrods.

The Bulletin story says of him: "We agreed that life was rich indeed for Joe Mott, and after shaking hands with him and his wife, we went away convinced that after all, the best sermon that can be preached on life and living is the way a man lives, particularly a man like Joe Mott, who has lived by the Golden Rule, enriching his own and the lives of those with whom he comes in contact."

(By Associated Press)

COLUMBUS—Hundreds of rural Buckeye residents started brief vacations today in advance of their spring farm work to learn what's new in agriculture at the 47th annual farmers' week on the Ohio State university campus.

College officials said preparations had been made to entertain approximately 7,500 persons during the five-day program, which includes discussions by about 300 speakers on virtually every phase of present-day agriculture.

Heading today's opening schedule was an analysis of the national farm program by Claude R. Wickard of Washington, D. C., north-central division director of the agricultural adjustment administration.

Gov. John W. Bricker and John T. Brown, state director of agriculture, were slated for addresses Wednesday.

Tuesday has been designated especially for farm bureau members, Thursday will be grange day and Friday, rural church day.

Professors in the college of agriculture said special attention would be devoted to discussions on livestock, vegetable and fruit crops, grains, bee keeping, dairying, poultry and forestry.

The largest increase was shown in scarlet fever where 21 cases were reported during the month. There was 19 cases of chickenpox, five of venereal diseases, four Tularemia, three tuberculosis, two mumps and one each of measles and pneumonia.

Births during the month showed nearly a 200 per cent increase. There were 37 babies born in December as compared with 14 for the previous month, to bring the total to 287 for the 12-month period.

Deaths also showed an increase from 16 reported in November to 31 recorded last month to bring the total number of persons who died last year in the county to 232.

The first case of diphtheria to be recorded in Richland county in nearly a year was reported to the health department today.

The victim is Gerald Boyce, 14, Shelby high school youth. Dr. Roy C. Rehder, city-county health commissioner said the boy had been quarantined at his home on the Springmill-Shelby road.

Dr. Rehder said that there was no immediate danger among the students at the school as all those who had ridden the same school bus with the youth had been checked.

He pointed out however that the only positive protection against the disease was innoculation.

Appears In Concert Here

MARIAN ANDERSON

* * * * *

CIVIC MUSIC GROUP TO HEAR FAMED CONTRALTO TOMORROW

Mansfield tomorrow night will be crowded into the calendar of the concert singer whose programs are now booked solidly through 1940, who is said to be the highest paid concert singer in the world, and who has just recently been awarded the highest honor that can be made by her own people.

The Mansfield Civic Music Association will present Marian Anderson, Negro contralto, in a concert of Bach, Schubert and other classic numbers as well as Negro spirituals at 8 p. m. tomorrow in the Senior High school auditorium.

Miss Anderson, who has won the highest praise of music critics the world over, was awarded the Spingarn Medal of 1938, given by the Association for the Advancement of the Colored People for the "highest or noblest achievement by an American Negro."

Born in Philadelphia in one of the poorer districts, she began singing in the junior choir of a neighborhood church, and her mother worked as a dressmaker to give her daughter lessons in voice. Members of the church, inspired by her voice and confident that hers was a voice that would one day be heard in the great music centers, pooled their small resources to further her career.

The unusual quality and range of her voice attracted attention. While still quite young she became soloist with the Philadelphia Philharmonic Symphony Society. Some intimation of her brilliant future was given when she won a competition against 300 voices which was sponsored by the New York Philharmonic.

This, however, was only the prelude to her real triumph, which came when she toured Europe.

A number of out-of-town members of the association is expected to attend the concert which is one of the outstanding events in Mansfield's music history. The event is open only to civic music members. Single admission tickets are not available.

Dismissals by Sherwood in the welfare department included 70 in the division of aid for the aged, four in the division of public assistance, and three in the commission for the blind. All were connected with the Columbus headquarters.

Sherwood said he intended to revamp all county offices and effect further savings by additional dismissals. Today's discharges brought to 138 the number of welfare department employes cut off in the first three weeks of the new Republican administration, and increased to more than 2,100 the total number of state employes fired.

Retention of Henry G. Robinson, chief of the division of public assistance was indicated by Sherwood.

Fear of a similar fate for himself, his cronies believed, or a severe stomach ailment, in the opinion of Dewey, drove him to snatch up a pistol from a Dewey investigator's coat and shoot himself through the head.

The shooting took place at the pretentious hideaway in suburban White Plains which Dewey had rented as a sanctuary for Weinberg, J. Richard (Dixie) Davis, one-time kid mouthpiece for the notorious Dutch Schultz gang which Hines is accused of protecting for pay; and Big Harry Schoenhaus, another Schultz henchmen. They were held in "protective custody."

Hospital Requirements Increase.

MANSFIELD'S increase in needs for hospital space, within the twenty-year period since General hospital came into use; provides an excellent illustration of changes that have come about here during the past two decades.

From the small Emergency hospital, first in the Y. M. C. A. basement and later on West Third street, to the present General hospital has been a long step in hospitalization facilities in Mansfield.

But even this has not been enough and there is apparent urgent need for space in which to care for more patients.

Anticipating future needs, on the basis of past experience, it seems unlikely that the present projected use of storage space in providing an additional ward of 14 or 16 beds will do more than bridge the immediate emergency rather than meeting requirements of even the next few years.

With a record number of 3,671 patients treated at General hospital last year, and requirements of the maternity ward extending to birth of 613 babies, with increasing trend toward use of the hospital for obstetrical cases, it is clear that some plan must be devised in the near future that will further increase hospital facilities in Mansfield.

There is requirement, of course, for hospital care of indigents in emergency cases, but Mayor Hunter is to be commended for his insistence that indigent patients be released from the hospital at the earliest time they can be safely cared for elsewhere at less expense to taxpayers. While instances of excessively long hospitalization at public expense may be rare exceptions, there should be none of them, unless costs are met by interested individuals rather than from city funds.

Increase in hospital facilities to the extent of being in accord with Mansfield's program of progress stands high among desirable accomplishments for this year.

Ignorance and Disease Link With Crime.

STUDY of the annual report of Arthur L. Glattke, superintendent of the Ohio state reformatory, not only reveals the diversity of problems faced by those engaged in supervision of such an institution but also gives better understanding of the large part ignorance plays in contributing to law violation.

The fact that the 1,415 inmates sentenced to the reformatory during 1938 exceeds the number received in any year since 1932 may not encourage belief that crime is decreasing, but it must also be kept in mind that while the average age of those committed last year was 21.9 years the average mental age was 12 years. Of the total it is noted that 1,024 had no more than common school education, that 18 were illiterate and 35 barely able to read and write. These newcomers, it is further revealed, came from homes in which there was a large percentage of illiteracy or where schooling of parents carried no further than ability to read and write.

Congested cities continue to account for the greater part of reformatory population, eight large counties being credited with 52 per cent of the year's admissions while the other 80 counties sent only 48 per cent of the total. Defiance, Geauga, Medina, Noble and Paulding have a clear record of no commitments to the reformatory in 1938, while Cuyahoga, as usual, leads the list.

Existence of social diseases among young men sent to the reformatory is also worthy of thought in considering the close linking of immorality with crime, with the institution hospital report showing 17,200 treatments for venereal diseases during the year. It is also mentioned that the parole board is continuing the policy of not considering release of any inmates showing positive syphilitic tests.

Turning to the school department of the institution, the report is more encouraging, with indication of constant efforts to improve the educational opportunities of inmates.

> From the report: "The large number of inquiries we have received from inmates who have left the institution on parole gives us cause to believe that many are returning to school to continue their education. This gives us encouragement to continue our educational program and thus awaken a desire, in those who are committed to our institution, for higher objectives and honesty when the time comes for them to leave on parole."

A number of other institutional matters are touched on in the report—religious training, recreation, industries, farm work, discipline, the newly installed psychiatric clinic, the new dining hall, and other construction and improvement work, much of which was done by inmates.

All in all, while there are those who, because of ignorance or viciousness, must be temporarily or permanently placed under restraint, it appears that such an institution as the Ohio state reformatory is performing commendable service in providing opportunities for reformation and rehabilitation for a considerable number of young men who are victims of childhood environment rather than intentional criminals.

Also it is good to know that so much sincere interest and understanding is being evidenced in handling the varied responsibilities of reformatory supervision.

More Money for Highway Construction.

CUTTING administration costs in the state highway department, so that more money will be available for constructing and maintaining highways, is a course that will be very generally commended.

According to Murray D. Shaffer, newly appointed division engineer, this is to be the highway department policy under the Bricker administration and accounts for the number of administrative jobs already eliminated.

Waste of public money through exorbitant administrative costs in the state highway department during the Davey administrations was severely criticised, but not corrected.

While reasonable adminstrative costs are legitimate, and essential to efficient construction work, there is no justification for paying public money to make jobs for political party workers.

Information that ten capable men can do the work previously done by one hundred should be interesting to taxpayers.

Watching Trends

—By PRESTON GROVER

WASHINGTON — In surroundings as ornate and costly as Herr Hitler's new palace, a group of Americans and Germans are trying still to end the "war-before-the-war."

The war with Germany officially ended in the early twenties, when we signed the peace treaty. But the war-before-the-war never has been settled. It dates from the years before we entered the World war, when every major accident was attributed to German spies. It is a tempting case for American claimants for they are sure of their pay—in cash—if they win. The money, some $26,000,000, is in the treasury, the receipts from sale of Germany patents and property seized here during the war.

On a hot July night in 1916 flames suddenly blazed upon a barge loaded with TNT near New Jersey's Black Tom peninsula, that juts into New York harbor. It was at a terminal of the Lehigh Valley railroad, the present principal claimant. There were several other barges and some railroad cars there loaded with high explosives awaiting shipment to England.

* * *

Two for $25,000,000.

FOR two hours, into the early morning, the fire burned. It spread to other powder-laden barges. A brave tugboat captain hooked onto two of them and towed them out to sea where they burned without exploding. Another barge floated toward Ellis Island, sending immigrants and officials into a panic. It also burned without exploding.

But one barge near Black Tom let go. The blast sent a baby into fatal convulsions three miles away. A million dollars worth of plate glass was blown out of downtown New York windows. The Statue of Liberty was pock-marked. Strangely enough, most New Yorkers were off the streets then—it was around 2 a. m. Otherwise there might have been a staggering loss of life. Barely a half dozen were killed.

Six months later, in the midst of a January cold spell, fire started in the huge shell-making plant of the Canadian Car and Foundry company at Kingsland, across the harbor from New York. In a trice the plant was a battlefield. Millions of dollars worth of shells being manufactured for Russia began exploding in a series of blasts which sounded to New Yorkers like a bombardment.

The two explosions caused damage of nearly $25,000,000, but no claim was entered at once. Four months later we entered the war.

After the peace treaty the U. S. placed claims upon Germany for the loss. Ever since, representatives of this country have argued that German agents set off the explosions to stop shipments to the Allies. Germany has agreed that if this can be proved, the claims should be paid.

* * *

Side Concessions.

IN THE early twenties, former German agents, several still living in the United States, denied complicity in the explosions. Later, several repudiated their stories and "confessed" they had hired this and that man to do the job.

In 1930, however, a joint commission of Germans and Americans unanimously rejected American claims on the grounds it had not been proved that German agents caused the disasters. The commission said several of the important ex-spy witnesses were "proved liars."

Americans contended Germany would not surrender necessary documents and files, even though they had promised to do so. They sought a rehearing. Now the case again is being argued, this time before Justice Roberts of the supreme court and German and U. S. commissioners meeting in a walnut-paneled, crystal-lighted chamber in the supreme court palace.

In 1936 Germany agreed to settle for roughly $20,000,000, but later repudiated the agreement, reputedly on the grounds that the U. S. refused certain trade concessions on the side.

Americans now argue that the commission was misled by lying witnesses. A skilful German lawyer, who clicks his heels to the commission when he bows, argues that the commisison was not misled because it knew the witnessses were lying, and said so in its 1930 decision.

Testimony and records gathered from lumber camps, Mexican hideouts, factory pay rolls, German and American archives, and attics of Americans who spied for Germany before the war, have piled up an astounding mass of documents.

Cutest is a recent letter from the German representative to the American representative. It ends with the salutation:

"Heil Hitler."

How It Started

—By JEAN NEWTON

'Riffraf"—an Old Word.

Not slang but an altogether legitimate word, with a dignified place in the lexicon, is "riffraf" for rabble or nondescript human flotsam and jetsam.

"Riffraf" is a combination of the Old English rif and raf every particle, easily and naturally extended to include first "refuse" and then, figuratively, the lowest order of society.

Uncertainty Slows Up Congress

—By CARTER FIELD

WASHINGTON—There is no use expecting any speed from this session of congress. It simply is not in the wood. Senators and representatives have their ears to the ground, their eyes strained for the most likely bandwagon, their brains concentrated on the most important question of the ages: "What is best for ME?"

Gentlemen who have not already burned their bridges will be careful about dropping sparks. Some things, such as the relief appropriations, MUST be decided rather promptly—cannot be postponed. But even on this there is the obvious groping for the most expedient thing—politically—so patent that the ponderous phrases deceive no one accustomed to watching the political wheels go round. As for example Pat Harrison with his amendment for cutting the appropriation, but not turning anybody off the WPA rolls!

It's just one of those things, politically, which happens every time a very strong man approaches the end of his reign—complicated—as in the case of every strong president since Washington—with a trace of suspicion that this MAY not be the end!

* * *

NOBODY knows whom to tie to! Nobody knows whether the Democratic nominee next year will be a conservative, a New Dealer, or just a liberal. The whole feeling is best illustrated by a recent conversation just outside the senate chamber. It happened that the man generally regarded as the No. 1 prognostigator of the New Deal was talking with some newspaper men, who were wonder who would be nominated by the two parties.

"Well," said the prognostigator, "if some one came along and offered me 100 to 1 that I could not name the next president. I would take the bet, and name Thomas Dewey."

This positively does NOT mean that the gentleman in question thinks the Republicans are going to win. But he thinks there is the possibility that they may, and he is fairly sure that they will nominate one of a very small group of men—he talked about three. Whereas the Democrats may conceivably name any one of a dozen, with an outside chance that some compromise candidate may be decided upon who is not in the picture now at all. Which illustrates the dilemma confronting the ambitious congressman.

He knows that merely following the president is not enough to keep him in his $10,000 a year (with perquisites) job. He knows that fighting Roosevelt on a few issues is not going to defeat him. But that's not enough. He wants to be on the bandwagon—wants to be able to dictate patronage to the next president—wants to be on the side of each question that comes up which will be popular in his district and state. He wants at least a chance for a lame-duck appointment if he should fall by the wayside in the next primary or election.

* * *

CRYSTALIZATION has not begun. It may follow the present debate on relief. It may not come until the neutrality and armament programs are up. The whole picture may change one way if business continues to revive, another if it slumps, and still another if war should come.

But make no mistake about this. There are a lot of boobs in the house and senate, but most of them are very smart politicions. They can feel which way the wind is blowing—as soon as it begins to blow—and, with the exception of a few sturdy characters too patriotic, or dumb, to bend, they will wind up on the side where their butter is most likely.

Health Advice

Careful Diet Required for Aged.

—By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

REGULATION of the diet in the elderly is more important than at any other period of life, except infancy. And it is even harder than in infancy because habit fights every attempt to make changes.

There are two classes of old people who are especially hard to handle. Because the senses of taste and smell are blunted, some of them crave highly seasoned, rich food. They almost invariably suffer from their indulgences because the appetite is way ahead of the capacity of the digestive system to take care of their preferments.

The old people of today were brought up at a time when food was simpler and coarser and less varied. Some stick tenaciously to the habits of their youth and refuse to accept any of the great number of new and varied foods which are put on the market so inexpensively today.

Hard on the Old.

The doctrine that roughage and a coarse diet will relieve constipation may be all right for the middle-aged but it is a very bad doctrine for the aged. Constipation is a regular feature of the latter decades of life, but here roughage is not indicated.

There is a very good reason for the constipation of old age. The intestinal walls become thinned out and a pouching in the lower part of the large intestine—the colonic pouch—is a regular finding in people above 70. This pouch catches food and causes stasis and gives the impression of an accumulation in the intestines. These sensations the patient tries to relieve by more and more, and stronger and stronger cathartics. This tendency must be resisted. An occasional enema is much more satisfactory than a cathartic by mouth. Stones often form in these pouches and have to be removed mechanically.

If a cathartic is to be used for old people, the best is cascara, which should not be taken more than once every other day.

Soft Foods.

This being the main difficulty, the diet of the aged should consist of soft foods, such as well cooked meats, pureed vegetables, fruit juices, milk, custards, eggs, toast, etc. Peas, beans, cabbage, cucumbers and tomatoes usually cause gas and bloating.

"Wine is the milk of the aged," and one of the best digestants after the age of 60 is a glass of sherry or port wine with meals. These do not affect the stomach and seem to give strength.

Old Dr. George Cheyne used to say that we should go out of life as we came in—on a diet of milk. This opinion, however, is 300 years old, and most modern specialists in diseases of old age believe that a glass or two of milk a day, along with other food, is as much as can be tolerated.

Should You Give Your Youngster "A Better Start Than You Had"?

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

Offer closes at midnight, Feb. 11. Send to Elsie Robinson, care of this paper—mark COLUMNIST FOR A DAY on envelope—then watch for the fireworks!)

RULE NO. 1 for all Grade A American Parents is by unanimous consent — "I MUST GIVE MY CHILD AN EASIER AND BETTER START THAN I HAD."

Which listens fine. But how's it working out? IS IT HELPING OR IS IT HAMSTRINGING YOUNG AMERICA? Who's asking? Some old fogey? Anything but! Young America, itself, in the person of sweet, smart little Sybil Cohen of Chicago, Ill. . . . Not caring who or what she hits, says Sybil—

"Our parents—God bless them—want to give us the easiest, happiest and most comfortable of lives. But have they given us foundations to support such lives—or the stamina to make use of such good fortune? THEY HAVE NOT!

"The young people of today feel that they have a just and natural right to Health, Wealth, Happiness and Security. BUT HAVE THEY . . . AND, IF SO, WHY? What have we today which the Pilgrims didn't have! The Pilgrims suffered bitter cold in unheated cabins. They lived in constant danger of death by starvation or Indian torture; yet they felt no discouragement or resentment. They did not feel they had been cheated. Instead, they thanked God daily for the abundance of their new land—and for the chance to live as free men and work out their own destinies.

"SHOULD WE ASK OR EXPECT ANY MORE THAN THEY DID? IS IT SAFE TO GIVE US ANY MORE? . . . IS IT WISE TO GUARANTEE ANY MAN SAFETY UNTIL HE HAS WON HIS RIGHT TO IT AND PROVEN HIS ABILITY TO HANDLE IT?"

Sybil Cohen—age 25,
Chicago, Ill.

There's a two-fisted challenge! And not only to doting parents but to our whole American scheme of things. As a nation, we're practically 100 per cent sold on the notion that life should be as safe and soft as possible. A delightful theory — if you can make it work. But a couple of peeks at the current scene should convince anyone that you CAN'T and it ISN'T. Easy Going is fine, if you can afford it — but there's nothing more demoralizing to our human nature than Liberty we haven't won . . . Rights we haven't worked for . . . Safety we haven't established by our own sweat.

Whereupon the inevitable chorus will arise. "That kinda croaking went out with sackcloth and ashes. It was Okay for the Pilgrims to be Grim Guys—They Had to—or part with their scalps. But times are easy now. We aren't living in any savage wilderness. Why go looking for trouble? We've got the breaks, why not use 'em?"

True, indeed—and swell advice, if life consisted merely of keeping your shape together. But it happens to consist of much more. Courage, for instance. And the fresh, keen edge of Curiosity. Imagination. Honesty. Self-respect. . . . all the proud and lusty qualities which go to make real Manhood and Womanhood. And when one considers these things, the picture changes—and how!

FOR THE YOUNGSTER WHO WANTS TO MAKE SOMETHING OF HIMSELF AND NOT MERELY EXIST, OUR MODERN WORLD IS INFINITELY MORE DANGEROUS AND DEMORALIZING THAN THE PILGRIMS' WILDERNESS . . . PUSH-BUTTONS HAVE WRECKED FAR MORE LIVES THAN TOMAHAWKS. "LIGHT HOUSEKEEPING" HAS WRECKED MORE FAMILIES THAN INDIAN RAIDS.

Nevertheless, I'm not worrying much about Young America. Even if Dad does treat him sappy, I'm still convinced that, if it came to a choice between losing his SCALP or his SPINE, the kid would keep his spine!

Man About Manhattan

—By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK—Not long ago a young man who appeared as a gangster in an important drama went on tour with the show after it fulfilled its Broadway run, and while in Chicago a couple of real gangsters became so fascinated by his performance they called on him backstage.

They even invited him to accompany them on a round of the town, and in this manner he was introduced to the Chicago half-world and to a number of the boys who rode with Capone across the wild Prohibition years.

It was quite an experience and when he related it to a number of us on a recent afternoon there was one man present who adopted a surprising attitude.

"You must have been crazy," he stated, "to kick around with gangsters. Why should you wish to associate with confessed lawbreakers and, for all you know, murderers? I think there is something wrong with anyone who will even speak to people like that."

* * *

WELL, I think the fellow who made these indignant remarks is a little off stride. I'm not recommending mobsters as ideal playmates, but I happen to know a couple of gangsters and they've never done me any harm. On the contrary, they have been of considerable assistance at times on stories, and from them I have obtained information that otherwise could not have been learned.

There is one fellow, a big, ugly redhead with a grin a yard wide, who was identified with one of the big mobs for years. He scared the wits out of me by stepping up to my side in a restaurant one night and asking, "Are you the reporter who wants some dope on smuggled gold?"

That was the time the country had just gone off the gold standard and mobsters were securing large quantities of the metal by intimidating hoarders. Then they would smuggle it into Mexico and bring it back into this country through a legal port of entry. New gold brought into the U. S. through legal ports of entry paid enormous dividends, sometimes twice as much as the price paid for gold already in this country.

Well, I didn't know what to reply, but finally I said, "Yes."

"Okay, pal," he replied, "you treated a buddy of mine swell in a story once, and if what I know can help you you're welcome to it."

* * *

SO HE outlined the whole amazing procedure—how gangsters found out the names of prominent businessmen who were hoarding gold, how they compelled these men to "sell," and how they flew the gold by plane into Mexico.

It was an absorbing tale and one which I made much use of. I never would have got it if I hadn't spent half the night in a restaurant with a gangster.

Later, when we shook hands and prepared to separate, he said, "I was glad to tell you this. And say, if you ever get into any trouble, see me before you do anything or say anything. I got a hunch I can fix it for you."

Fortunately I've never had to find out if that hunch of his would work, but I see him here and there about town, and when I do I never fail to hail him with a big hello.

A Farmer's Diary

The Seed Catalog.

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

ALREADY six seed catalogs have come, from as many sections of the country, — eastern Pennsylvania, western New York, southern Michigan, Ohio, Louisiana, and Iowa.

Before spring I shall have as many more, which I hoard on a special shelf, ready to be consulted at a moment's notice. How pleasant these long winter evenings, after a day in the woods, or hauling manure, to take off my heavy boots and sit by the fragrant hearth and leaf over the pages of tempting fruits and vegetables. Last night I picked up one that had a dish of luscious strawberries heaped to overflowing. It was a picture to compare with those famous grapes that an ancient Greek artist painted so naturally that the birds flew down to feed.

On another page, the scarlet tomatoes, the blood red beets, the purple eggplant and the golden bantam corn shouted their virtues and health-giving values to me, and I gave them more than passing notice. There was a huge cabbage field where 999 out of a thousand plants had grown to splendid, hard-headed maturity.

Half way through the book, I came upon a reproduction of a 20-acre field of yellow corn, at harvest time. The shocks were three feet taller than the man who stood beside the last one cut. I did not see a single weed, or one hill missing as I looked far down the stubble rows.

In another place, a large patch of potatoes was half dug. The surface of the dirt was so well covered with spuds that hardly any of the earth was visible. I looked into it from the western side, and the early sun shone brightly above the treetops. Below, I read, "Money in potatoes!" I saw no bugs or blight upon the standing rows.

I closed the catalog and laid it on my knee. In the flickering shadows of the firelight, a vision of the garden and the fields at harvest time grew upon the wall, in natural colors, more perfect than any hand could paint.

I smiled, in my fullness of heart, and half rose to walk about the lovely fields—when the book fell on the floor with a thud! But I was still in pleasant humor, as I locked the door and went to bed.

CHAPTER XII

Alix was conscious of a lull in conversation when she entered the dressing-room at the office. The girls filed out and Sally Thompson came in from lunch. She was always laden with packages and happy over a bargain she had made.

Alix looked at her intently. "Sally, I want you to tell me the truth. What are people saying about Mr. Lawrence and me? I seem to be the topic of conversation when I'm absent. What is it all about?"

Sally's lips compressed. "I'll tell you. Haven't your ears been burning? The night he asked you to stay late I opened the door and saw you. You were as white as a ghost. I knew you'd had a scene. I closed the door quietly and I was glad you hadn't seen me. But I must have looked kind of funny when I turned around. I went out to get my coat and hat and when I passed the office, I saw Grace and Betty at the door, listening. They get around plenty and they made a big story out of what they heard."

Alix said, "He kissed me. I was furious and threatened to leave. That was all. He didn't ask me to marry him. No, I don't believe this talk started from that."

Sally said, "You've got too much sense to marry him. He couldn't be faithful to any woman."

* * *

Don was ringing for her when she went into the office. She went into his office and with her pencil poised for dictation asked, trying to make her voice casual, "Are you planning to be married, Don?"

She looked at his face lined with good living, at the clipped blond mustache, and his blue eyes that crinkled at the corners when he smiled. Man about town, she thought. . . .

"I might be. Who knows?" he laughed. "No reason why I shouldn't get married, is there? Living with Nancy is like living with a social worker. She wants to reform the world. She's always getting money out of me to help somebody. Nancy, the reformer. She goes back to her mother in June." He smiled. "The life of a bachelor is emphatically not the life for me, my dear."

"Are congratulations premature?"

"Yes, a bit," he said. "I'll let you know when the happy event is about to take place. You heard what's being done to the house? It'll be a show place when it's finished."

"Yes, I heard." Bernice's house. It would always be her house.

"I want you to ride out with me sometime and take a look at it. A woman's opinion, you know."

Her smile was puzzled. "But why my opinion? Of course I'll ride out with you but the only ideas about houses I have are my ideas for my house and it will be a much less pretentious place than Ivy house, I'm sure. You're being very mysterious about this."

Eddie was waiting to take her home.

"I found out about the source of the gossip," she told him, getting into the shabby little roadster. "Don doesn't want to marry me. There's some one else. He wouldn't tell me about her. I think he likes keeping everybody guessing."

Eddie said, "I thought there must be some good reason why he didn't take a cruise this winter. But I thought it was you."

"It isn't and I'm glad. But Bernice . . . She asked me to tell her if I heard anything but I don't think I'll tell her until I'm quite sure. There's something about this I don't like, Eddie. Don has what Tuck calls 'the cat ate the canary' look. He looks secretly amused and very pleased with himself. I'd give anything to know."

Suddenly her mind fastened on Kurt again. He was coming back tonight from New York and tonight she would tell Tod about him and tomorrow Tod would go to his office. A job, independence, his self-respect regained. Perhaps Tod would agree then to meet her friends, Eddie and Bernice and Nancy. Nancy . . . Nancy and Tod . . . Queer to think of those two, the girl bitter to love, the boy bitter at life. . . .

Tuck was in the kitchen.

Alix said, "Hello," and pulled her hat from her hair as she stood in the doorway. "What are we having for dinner? I had lunch with Eddie and he brought me home. So you see he isn't angry. We're still great friends."

* * *

Her voice was cheerful. This was being brave, she thought again. Everything was the same. Eddie bringing her home, Tuck in the kitchen, a fraternity dance with Eddie on Saturday night. Everything was the same except what had happened in her heart. And though a thousand times a day she thought, "After a while I won't care so much, I'll get over it," she knew she lied, that she would never get over it.

"Isn't Tod in yet?" she asked.

Tuck said, low in her throat, "There's a letter from him on the table in the living-room. It was there when I came in. I'm afraid."

A second later she was ripping open the envelope. She read: "I can't stay any longer, Alix. I've been every place I know to get a job and I've failed. There's one black sheep in every family and I guess I'm the one in ours. I can't be a burden to you. I can't see you take a big slice of your salary every week and give it to me. I've been on the level with you since I've been back. I haven't thrown away any of the money you've given me. You've been swell. Maybe it seems funny for somebody like me to talk about pride but I seem to have an overdose of it. You won't like this and you'll worry. Well, don't. I am never coming back until I feel that I am at least an equal. Good-bye and good luck. Love, Tod."

The telephone rang but she stood motionless, a hard constriction in her throat. It was queer that at a time like this she should think of the pathetic tenderness of his letter and the word "love." In all their years of writing to each other he had never once used that word.

"I'll answer the phone," Tuck said.

Confused, shaken, Alix did not hear what Tuck said to the caller but she heard when she said, "Kurt is coming tonight. It's his secretary calling."

"Tell Kurt not to come," she said. "There's no reason for his coming now."

"His secretary rang off," Tuck said.

"I've failed Tod again. I couldn't hold him. What will he do now? Get on a boat that will take him to the end of the world or—or get into trouble."

"He'd be better off in jail. You'd know where he was anyway."

"Don't say that. I'm never going to stop trying to help him. A lot of it isn't his fault. We were so poor. And he did change a little when he was here. He wanted to stay but he didn't want to be a burden. He was thinking of me."

"You made your own chance, child. When he's down and out and has pawned the clothes you bought him, he'll come back."

"He said he'd never come back until he could be at least my equal."

After dinner (she tried to eat to please Tuck) she went into the bedroom and lay across the bed. In the quietness of the room she fell asleep. When she awoke, she heard voices, Kurt's deep clear voice and Tuck's. He would be wonderfully kind to her, she thought. He, who never could and never would be her lover, would be her friend.

Ten minutes later she went across the room to him, held out her hand, and smiled.

"Tuck has been telling me about your brother, Alix. I'm terribly sorry. Now I blame myself for not seeing him sooner. I've let you down when you need me."

"It isn't your fault. Don't blame yourself."

* * *

There was so much to admire about her, he thought. He had not forgotten that evening in New York with Alix before Gina came back into his life and swept away the tender new thing that was love for Alix. Star dust in her eyes. . . . He remembered that, too. But seeing Gina had uprooted that which had been only lightly buried beneath his hurt and bitterness. Had Alix loved him? You flatter yourself, he thought. We might have been in love if I had not seen Gina again. But now Alix and I are friends. He thought but he didn't say, "There's no star dust in your eyes tonight, Alix," never realizing that it was he and not Tod who had taken it away.

Why didn't he go, she thought? Why did he stay and fill the room with his voice that she could remember every time she was alone in the room, his voice and the way he looked tonight? He had just returned from Gina. "He's blind," she thought, "blind from the enchantment of being in love with Gina who is so beautiful."

"If your brother comes back, will you let me know at once, Alix? It won't be too late then."

Too late. . . . She wanted to cry out, "Everything is too late, Kurt! I met you too late, loved you too late!"

When he left, Tuck took a deep breath and said, "I may as well tell you this, Alix. I'm not going to the office tomorrow. In fact, I'm never going to that office or any office again. Today the doctor said I couldn't work any more. My heart, as you know. So I resigned today. I'm worked out. Finished."

STAMPS EXCEED TAXES

SPRINGFIELD, O.—(U.P.)—Collection of personal property taxes last year in the tiny corporation of Clifton was an expensive proposition for the county, officials have learned. The cost of the 3-cent stamp to mail tax proceeds amounted to three times what the community received as its share.

CUTICURA

POPULATION OF O. S. R. GOES UP 322 DURING '38

An increasing number of commitments during 1938 despite a 30 per cent rise in paroles boosted the population of Ohio state reformatory to 3,066 on Jan. 1, a gain of 322 over the previous year, the annual report of Supt. Arthur L. Glattke to Charles L. Sherwood, state welfare director, showed today.

Glattke reported that the average age of inmates was 22.

Commitments last year totaled 1,415 and paroles numbered 884 as compared with 1,246 new prisoners admitted and 884 paroled in 1937. During the year 120 inmates were transferred to the Ohio penitentiary, all of whom were second offenders.

Only prisoners between the ages of 16 and 30 who are first offenders are received at the institution.

8 Counties Lead.

The state's most populous counties contributed 48 per cent of last year's inmates while five counties had no commitments, the report adds. The eight counties with the most commitments were Cuyahoga, Franklin, Hamilton, Montgomery, Summit, Lucas, Mahoning and Stark.

For the second successive year neither Geauga nor Noble counties had any commitments. The other three were Defiance, Medina and Paulding.

Of the 1,415 prisoners admitted last year, 70 per cent were white; 971 said they attended grade school and 377 high school. Only 18 could neither read nor write, and 15 had received a college education.

Glattke said the average mental age was 12 years and that the average I. Q. was 74. Nearly 55 per cent of the commitments were under 21 years of age.

Although prisoners were sentenced to the reformatory for 69 types of offenses during the year, robbery headed the list with 389 sent up on that charge. The other six offenses which sent 75 per cent of the prisoners to the institution were burglary and larceny, auto theft, operating a motor vehicle without the owner's consent, burglary, grand larceny and breaking and entering.

AID TRANSIENTS

Volunteers Give Food, Lodging to Scores in Past Year.

Scores of Mansfield's destitute families and transients received food, clothing and lodging last year from the Volunteers of America headquarters on North Main street, the annual report compiled by William P. Westcott, officer in charge, showed today.

The city's homeless found a haven in the Volunteers' welfare agencies which provided 535 free meals and beds and distributed 481 articles of clothing during the year.

Providing a free employment service, the Volunteers' headquarters found part-time work for 31 men in 1938 and provided employment for 51 others in the industrial department of the welfare agency.

Thirty-eight pieces of furniture and household articles were distributed to destitute families. With funds donated by the public, the Volunteers purchased and distributed 2,273 loaves of bread and 1,360 gallons of milk to the needy, Capt. Westcott said.

Nist.

BITTER CONTEST OVER WILL OF MALTED MILK HEIRESS SETTLED

(By International News Service)

RACINE, Wis.—W. Perkins Bull, king's counsel, will receive something less than half a million dollars from the estate of Mrs. Mabelle Horlick Sidley.

Terms of a final settlement in the bitter contest over the malted milk millions were read by County Judge J. Allen Simpson.

The heiress' 27-year-old son, William Horlick Sidley, was contesting the will which divided her estate — variously estimated at from three to ten million dollars —equally between him, the Toronto barrister, and St. John's Military academy at Delafield, Wis., after the payment of specific bequests.

Bull, it was learned, will receive a quarter of a million dollars cash and a "sizeable" check, the exact sum of which was not revealed. The $250,000 was a bequest to Bull as residuary legatee, and the unrevealed sum to be paid him was for renouncing any further interest in the estate.

Attorneys on both sides refused to discuss the settlement, but authorized Judge Simpson to release the following statement:

"Subject to the carrying out of the various necessary arrangements, the parties have agreed to the disposition of the contest on the following basis.

"Mr. Bull is to renounce his interest as the residuary legatee only, which interest is estimated to be of the order of $500,000. William H. Sidley is then, with the approval of the court, to withdraw his objections to the probate of the will.

"The estate is to be administered by two of the named executors, Col. Roy F. Farrand (headmaster of St. John's) and William H. Sidney."

Monday, Jan. 30.

Lucy, dear:

Here we are at the end of January with rain and fog instead of the usual snow—but let's hope some kind of cloudiness holds out past Thursday. No, Lucy, I don't like gloomy weather any better than you do—but in case you've forgotten, Thursday is groundhog day . . . so we don't want the sun to shine then—because it would be terrible if that gentleman should see his shadow and we'd have winter for another six weeks!

* * * * *

WITH semester examinations now a thing of the past, several Mansfield college students are at home visiting with their parents. Ed Willard is here from John Carroll in Cleveland and plans to stay all week. . . . Carolyn Wolf is visiting her parents—and this will be her last semester vacation—as she will be graduated from Denison university in June. Paul Cropper, jr., was home for a few days from Wittenberg, too.

* * * * *

Dick Olin made a hurried trip through our city over the week-end. He arrived from Kenyon college late Saturday night and then drove up to Cleveland yesterday with his friend, Jean Gifford—who's in nurses' training there.

* * * * *

* * * * *

WE HAVE a situation in Ohio rather like that of Mahammed and the mountain—only this time Cape Cod came to Lake Erie. Several years ago, a group of Clevelanders longed for summer homes on the water—where there would be good bathing beaches and docking facilities for pleasure boats. . . . So several ingenious men took over about sixty acres of swamp land—with frontage on Lake Erie and the Vermilion river. Now they have a charming and picturesque summer settlement with attractive Cape Cod cottages. . . . One of the principal instigators of this project (and who, incidentally, owns one of the most attractive houses in the group) is L. A. Wells—whose wife is a former Mansfielder—Stella Bowers—Bill's sister. If you're interested in reading more about Ohio's Cape Cod and seeing some pictures of the cottages—there's a complete story about them in this month's issue of the American Home magazine.

* * * * *

Paul and Anne (Zahniser) Stephens gave a tea yesterday afternoon at their home on Shepherd road . . . in honor of Dick and Virginia (Starkey) Tappan and John and Elizabeth Bissman. By the way, we're going to lose Dick and Virginia because they're moving to Washington, D. C., in the very near future.

* * * * *

Anne Verba, who has been teaching at Western avenue school, enrolled at Ohio university today to resume her studies. Anne was honored with a party given by Dorothy and Mary Jane Curtiss Friday evening, and went down to Athens on Saturday. She will complete her studies this semester and receive a degree in education this June.

* * * * *

PATTY PALMER and Elsie McConnell are so excited they can hardly wait until Wednesday—and they have good reason. They're going down to Washington and Lee university in Lexington, Va., for four days of dancing! The girls will be the guests of Elsie's brother, Jim, and Fred Farrar of New York City—the boys are fraternity brothers in Beta Theta Pi. There will be four dances—two formals, a tea dance Friday afternoon, and a fancy dress ball Friday evening—and Hal Kemp and his band are furnishing the music for all four! The girls don't quite know what to expect for the fancy dress affair—as the boys are having the costumes made for them—and they'll be of the pre-Civil war period. The theme for this dance will have to do with the return of Gov. Spotswood after his exploratory expedition through the Shenandoah valley. The ball room will be a replica of the governor's ball room in Williamsburg, Va., in 1716.

* * * * *

Speaking of Washington, as we were a little earlier, reminds me of Katherine McCormick—I've had a reply to my letter since I wrote you last Monday, so now I can tell you what she's doing. She is working for the government at the National Archives, and her mother, Hazel, manages the apartment house where they live. Kate says she'll be having a month's leave sometime soon—and she plans to come to Mansfield for a visit the very first thing. Won't it be nice to see her again, Lucy? You'll have to arrange a trip over then, too.

* * * * *

Do write soon, and in the meantime, be sure not to let Mr. Groundhog see his shadow Thursday.

Lovingly,

Marianne

Hasty Marriage Not Wise

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

"DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

"My parents were willing to give me anything I wanted, a lovely home, nice car, good clothes and spending money. Dick and I graduated in the same class at high school, and became engaged without my parents' approval.

"They said they really had nothing against Dick, except they thought 18 and 19 were too young to marry, and they wanted Dick to be settled in a job before they gave us their blessing. The only offers of work he had the following year, he didn't care about taking. He didn't want to work in a chain store, or be an usher in a theater, or work in a filling station.

"My father suggested that he study a profession or learn a trade and said he'd be willing to help him out. But you know how long that takes.

"I felt that after we were married, Dick would settle down, be more steady, and perhaps take a job he had turned down, but father wouldn't hear of it. He said positively that we couldn't be married and come home and live on him. But as I was his only child, I decided to take a chance.

"Last October we ran away and were married secretly. We had a little money. Dick borrowed $100 from his brother, and I sold what jewelry I had, and we started out to Iowa in my car, on our wedding tour, to visit Dick's family. They have a farm and said we would be welcome to stay with them. But I never dreamed such a hard life was possible. They got up when it was dark. The women worked in the dairy and the chicken houses. The men did the outside work. Dick wasn't used to anything of this sort, and of course couldn't stand it.

"So we went on and visited some more of his relatives, where things were almost as bad, and then decided after we'd been married three months to come home.

"Honestly, Miss Fairfax, I almost dropped dead when I rang the bell at my own home and found strangers. My parents had sold our home, right after we were married, and had taken a one-room and bath apartment in a family hotel. Dick and I had no money, and no place to stay. Finally, mother gave us $10 and told us that was positively to be the last. We got a furnished room, and have been eating at drug-store counters. It's all positively terrible. I never dreamed my parents would treat me this way.

"Can't they be compelled by law to do something for us? Please answer this soon. I'm utterly HEARTSICK."

If there is a law which compels parents to support their married children, I'm not aware of it. I think it's unlikely that your mother and father will let you go hungry. But they do want your husband to realize that in marrying you he must assume the responsibilities of marriage. And the best thing he can do is to try, and try hard, to get one of the several jobs he turned down.

When you were on those farms, you saw how hard people have to work for a living. City jobs are easier by comparison. Meantime, why don't you show your parents that now you've really grown up, and go out and look for a job? Jobs are not impossible to get, if one is decently educated and in earnest.

Send me a self-addressed, three-cent stamped envelope, and I'll send you the names of some books about job-getting.

Stretching Exercise For All

By MME. QUI VIVE

Babies stretch when they awaken. Note the pussy cat uncurling from her nap, how she extends her lithe body its full length. And the noble house dog. Though his mistress calls him for a romp he must first go through his stretching chores. Babies and animals obey a natural law. During sleep blood streams are sluggish; they have to be awakened. So with the muscles. Come, come, get busy, there's work to do. Stretching gives the order for activity.

Young ladies, middle-aged and elderly are out stalking good looks. They tote home the treasures of the make-up box, luscious perfumes. Once a week they toddle to the beauty shop to have the glorious crown waved and rolled. What about their bodies? A young, beautiful body is as great a beauty asset as a pretty face. What about exercise?

Stretching is a pleasant, simple, easily accomplished exercise; even a lazy girl can endure it. It flexes fibers, makes them elastic. Ten minutes of extending arms, legs, torso and neck will do as much good as five minutes of more violent movements. Better learn about this delightful means of keeping adipose tissues at, a distance and retaining youthful lines that form the charming silhouette.

* * *

When you awaken in the morning don't start on the day's activities by thinking of all the things you have to do. Get in form for work and play. Lie on your back; chuck the pillow aside. Stretch the neck, then the torso, flattening the tummy until it is cuddling against your spinal column. Keep the legs straight and rigid, try to touch your knees with your finger tips—you won't be able to do it, but that won't matter. Then, with arms stretched to the utmost, bring them above the head, try to extend them even further. With hands up, stretch the legs, even the little pink toes. There you are, all nice and long!

Relax. Go limp. Take three deep breaths, inhaling through the nostrils, exhaling through the lips. Start stretching again.

HOROSCOPE

For Tuesday, Jan. 31.

THE EXCELLENT planetary configurations bearing rule on the affairs of this day unite to give very auspicious opportunities for reaching cherished objectives. These should come, not only by industry and practical details, but as well by the endorsement and substantial co-operation of elders, superiors and those in power or influential position. There may be bequests, insurance or increased values in old investments, but in any perplexities use strategem and tact.

Those whose birthday it is should find themselves confronted by a year of opportunity for attaining gratifying fulfillments. These may come through individual effort, good judgment and persistent application, and also by the benefices of elders, superiors and those in position to proffer them. investments or old property interests may have substantial expansion. There are some hidden dangers to be wisely handled by tact and diplomacy; with strategem rather than hostility.

A child born on this day may be hardworking, progressive, studious and dependable, attracting recognition from elders and superiors who will assist in its cherished ambitions.

Marriage Meddlers

By ADELE GARRISON

Continuation of "Married Comrades"

Our young taxi driver was not boasting when he said that he could find any place we wished in the Jersey town to which he had brought us.

"We want to find a good restaurant," I told him, "a quiet clean place where we can get good food."

"I get you," he said. "Quality, without noise. I'll find it, if it's in town."

"I'm sure you will," I said, and in another ten minutes my optimism was justified.

"I never take one place's word," he said proudly as he opened the door. "But when all three of those places where I stopped told me this was the finest and quietest place in town, I thought it was a safe bet."

"I am sure of it," I told him. "How much do I owe you?"

"Oh! you're not going back to the city?" he said.

"No," I returned promptly, "but I am going to pay you, of course, whatever is right for your return trip."

His face cleared as quickly as it had clouded.

"Well! that's all right," he said. "I didn't know. Ladies sometimes don't understand the rules about these long trips, they don't figure that a fellow has to get back home again. Thank you, Ma'am. I'll just take your bags up for you."

"He surely was a true prophet," Mary said when we had finished the delicious luncheon served at a table by a window overlooking a formal garden. "I don't know when I've had a better feed. But isn't it about time we meandered over to the railroad station?"

I looked at my watch, and nodded.

"We don't want to make ourselves conspicuous getting there too soon, and being on exhibition in the waiting room," I said, "but, on the other hand, we don't want to cut it too short. By the time we pay our bill here, primp a bit, and get a taxi, we'll be able to make it with a comfortable margin for a possible breakdown of one taxi and the procuring of another."

"You don't take any chances, do you, Auntie Madge?"

"You can't where anything as important as the present issue is involved," I told her, quietly rising as I spoke.

"Keep a sharp look-out, here, on the train, and at the terminal, for anyone who appears to be taking any interest in our movements," I adjured her in low tones just before we arrived at the station.

"I shall be all eyes—and ears —" she said and kept her word. Without appearing to do so, her keen eyes swept every face within our ken, and I also kept a surreptitious watch upon our fellow travelers. But neither of us saw anyone who appeared to take the slightest interest in us, until we reached the New York terminal. Then, immediately after we had stepped from the train to the platform, Mary gripped my arm, the signal we had agreed upon as meaning "Look out!"

Diary of a Fashion Model

By GRACE THORNCLIFFE

WENT OVER to the World's Fair yesterday and I saw enough to know that visitors there are going to have a treat and an education all in one. Our firm, together with some other organizations, is going to put on a series of fashion shows, something that will entail a lot of work and a big headache, but something that it is an honor and a distinction to do. Am I glad that I have this cosmetic job to take care of! Well, you can just guess. For I used to do all the detail work connected with putting on shows and, now, beyond, seeing to the make-up, I'll have nothing to do except be an interested spectator.

But to get back to the Fair. It is stupendous, exceeding by far, anything ever done before. From all accounts, the San Francisco World's Fair is marvelous, too. But, as Dad says, the Fairs are both so different, that they don't conflict; they complement each other. I hope that all good Americans will decide to stay in their own country next summer instead of dashing off abroad. They will be glad that they did so, for in addition to seeing the Fairs, they will see marvels of scenery in whichever direction they travel. Bill has made me interested in the Fair because he has worked on several of the foreign pavilions and he is keen about the whole thing. I hope that I'll be in the East for part of the summer anyway. If I go to California in the Spring, I'll be able to spend time at the Fair in San Francisco.

Mother will have a field day with her photography and she already has some commissions, so she is going to make some money. What with Pam working, we are certainly bringing home the bacon. Well, Dad certainly made a start when he went into business. I'm sure that my sister is going to be happy at the shop now that she has so much time on her hands. There's nothing much to do in Southern California but play, and as Pam is the athletic type, time was something she had plenty of. Now she'll be busy and I'm sure that she will make contacts too that will help Ken. He still has the political bee in his bonnet and he is sure to seek some nomination or other sooner or later.

A new coat is indicated for those staying in town, a model that has an early Spring look about it. This coat is of green, red and brown plaid woolen with yoke and pockets of brown suede. The yoke and neck line are cleverly draped. The button centers are of suede, the loops are of cloth.

Wife Preservers

To save last-minute work when you are going to make a fresh tomato salad for guests or when you haven't much time to prepare a meal, drop them into hot water and skin them early in the day. Put in covered vegetable pan, and they are all ready for the last-minute preparations for the salad.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By Shepard Barclay

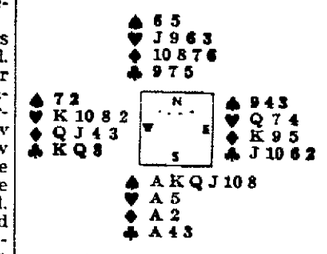
A FEW SURE THINGS

NOT MANY ABSOLUTE "sure thing" propositions are offered to bridge players. But there are a few which can be grasped, and which should be grasped, when the alternative involves any risk which is not commensurate with the possible gain. Among these may be included the cashing of the crucial trick which makes the contract for the declarer, or which defeats it for the defense. The same principle applies to bidding, in the selection of a contract, which can not possibly be beaten, in preference to one which may be defeated.



(Dealer: South. East-West vulnerable.)

It isn't often that any player sees such a hand as South held on this deal, containing all of the honors in no trump and a suit, especially in the ranking suit of spades. The particular rubber player who had this one let it go to his head.

After starting the bidding with 2-Spades and hearing North's correct strength denial of 2-No Trump, South made the perfectly correct rebid of 3-Spades and North the obviously proper bid of 3-No trump.

Right there is where South went wrong. He bid 4-Spades, which everybody passed. No possible development, outside of a revoke by the opposition, could enable him to make that contract, which was set one trick.

The simplest of counting would have shown South that at no trump he could run six spade tricks, barring a most freakish distribution of the outstanding ones, and could add on three more tricks for the side aces. Passing the 3-No trump call by North would have constituted the acceptance of a virtual sure thing, whereas bidding 4-Spades amounted to hoping for a trick of some kind from North without any basis for the expectation.

Hints On Etiquette.

You can cultivate culture, even if you have no money, position in life or family background. These things do not necessarily imply culture. Read good books, go to interesting lectures, cultivate a taste for the best things in life and you can attain it.

THEATERS

THIS AND THAT: The marriage of Nelson Eddy and Ann Franklin was as much a surprise to M-G-M as to his fans—many of whom probably cried into their pillows for Eddy has the staunchest of feminine fans. But like Ronald Colman he never discussed his own romances, and so his company was notified only 20 minutes before the ceremony. When the last Tarzan picture was made, Cheeta, the monk weighed only 60 pounds. Now she weighs 170 and when she jumps on Johnny Weissmuller she all but floors him . . . M-G-M has ballyhooed Nancy Kelly to the skies—but hard-headed critics opine that she isn't such shakes either as to looks or ability . . .

* * *

Good Entertainment.

Although "Kentucky" is another racing story in which the family fortunes are saved by their one horse winning the Derby, it still has practically everything that goes to make good screen entertainment. The picture is made in Technicolor and the climatic Derby is just as exciting as though it had been run on the Churchill Downs track. Loretta Young and Richard Greene are the descendents of families that have been feuding since the Civil war, but love and a good horse put an end to that. The film is at the Ohio.

* * *

Akim Turns To Comedy.

Akim Tamiroff, dark browed villain of many a picture drama, turns to comedy in "Paris Honeymoon" and very nearly steals every scene in which he appears, despite the fact that the very ingratiating Mr. Bing Crosby appears in many of the same scenes. Franciska Gaal, lovely young Hungarian actress who has not been favored by the producers since she came here a couple of years ago, is an addition to the romantic comedy. Several of the tunes—"You're A Sweet Little Headache" and "Funny Old Hill" will probably be song hits. The Madison is showing the picture.

* * *

Comedy Murder.

For its three-day program this week, starting tomorrow, the Majestic offers two interesting features. One of "Tropic Holiday" with Dorothy Lamour, Ray Milland, Bob Burns and Martha Raye, and the other is the hilarious murder mystery, "A Slight Case of Murder," with Edward G. Robinson. Gangster murders become excruiatingly funny when planned by the gangster who has social ambitions, while the carting around of seven bodies is far from gruesome.

* * *

"Alexander's Ragtime Band."

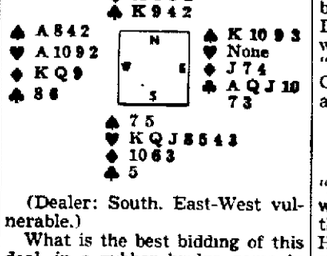
The Ritz returns to the old policy this week of running its first of the week program only through Monday and changing to a three day schedule on Wednesday. The top feature this week is "Alexander's Ragtime Band," the picture that was built around the melodies of Irving Berlin of the past quarter century. The cast is an important one headed by Tyrone Power, Alice Faye and Don Ameche, with a long list of well known supporting players. "It's All Yours" with Madeliene Carroll and Francis Lederer is also to be shown.

* * *

Family Story.

Another series of the popular "family life" pictures gets under way in Mansfield this week with the showing at the Park of "The Headleys At Home." Evelyn Venable, the Cincinnati girl who played in a number of Will Rogers films and with Fredric March in "Death Takes A Holiday," plays the socially ambitious wife, with Grant Mitchell as the husband. "Slave Ship," also on the bill, is the dramatic story of the last ship to carry a human cargo, with Warner Baxter, Wallace Beery, Elizabeth Allen and others.

Tomorrow's Problem.



(Dealer: South. East-West vulnerable.)

What is the best bidding of this deal, in a rubber bridge game in which everybody is playing with an unfamiliar partner?

Everyone wishing to grow lettuce ought to have a cold frame. If lettuce seeds are sown in March in the cold frame, when warm weather comes and the lettuce is put out in the garden it will head better and will be crisp and tender.

THE MISERY OF BEGINS TO GO

Massage VapoRub on the throat, chest, and back. Then spread a thick layer on the chest and cover with a warmed cloth. (No dosing, no stomach upsets.)

VapoRub's poultice-and-vapor action goes right to work—direct through the skin like a poultice, while its medicated vapors released by the body warmth are inhaled direct to the irritated air-passages with every breath.

This two-way action (inhalation and stimulation) loosens phlegm—clears the air-passages—checks tendency to cough—eases muscular soreness or tightness—relieves local congestion—and he soon feels comfortable again.

Long after he relaxes into restful sleep, VapoRub keeps right on working. And often by morning the worst of his cold is over. No wonder 3 out of 5 mothers put faith in VapoRub whenever anyone in the family has a cold!

Many Tricks Offered By Waffles

By PAULINE SCHOFIELD
Home Service Expert of the Ohio Fuel Gas Company.

Waffles, made of good ingredients and well baked are welcome at almost any meal—whether for the family or guests. At a late breakfast, an afternoon theater party, or a dessert bridge they may just hit the spot. Unexpected guests need not bother you since the ingredients for making waffles are usually already in your kitchen.

Waffles, piping hot and golden brown, served with melted butter and farmed sirup are already popular at breakfast. For luncheon, waffles served with a hearty sauce or a creamed dish are excellent. As dessert, waffle shortcake with fruit or rich waffles with ice cream or sauce are delicious.

Southern Waffles.

Flour, 2½ cups
Baking powder, 2 teaspoons
Salt, 1¼ teaspoons
Sugar, 2 teaspoons
Eggs, 4

Sift flour, measure, add baking powder, salt and sugar; sift again. Beat egg whites until stiff but not dry; set aside. Beat egg yolks; add cream. Add sifted dry ingredients and mix just enough to blend; add melted shortening. Fold in stiffly beaten egg whites. Bake in a moderately hot waffle baker for 3 to 4 minutes. Makes 8 waffles. Serve with butter and sirup or honey or with creamed chicken. May also be served as hot bread with southern fried chicken.

Cornmeal Waffles

Flour, ¾ cup
Baking powder, 3 teaspoons
Salt, 1 teaspoon
Sugar, 2 tablespoons
Eggs, 2
Milk, 1¼ cups
Cornmeal, 1½ cups

Sift flour, measure, add baking powder, salt and sugar, sift again. Beat egg whites until stiff but not dry; set aside. Beat egg yolks; add milk. Add sifted dry ingredients and cornmeal, mixing just enough to blend; add melted shortening. Fold in stiffly beatten egg whites. Bake in moderately hot waffle baker about 4 minutes. Makes 5 waffles. Serve with shaved maple sugar, with melted butter, warm sirup and frizzled Canadian bacon or ham with grilled sausage and apple rings or with shrimp creole.

Cheese Crisps.

Flour, 1¾ cups
Cold water, ½ cup
Milk, 1 cup
Heavy cream, 1 cup
Sugar, 1 teaspoon
Worchestershire sauce, 1½ teaspoons
Salt, 1 teaspoon

Sift flour, measure. Combine with water and milk; beat well with electric mixer or rotary beater. Let stand 2 hours. Whip cream stiff but not to butter, add sugar, fold into first mixture together with grated cheese, Worchestershire sauce and salt. Bake about 5 minutes until well browned and crisp. Grids should be slightly cooler than for regular waffles. Makes 6 waffles. Cut in shapes and serve as appetizers, plain or spread with anchovy butter. May also be used as a base for creamed vegetables.

Waffle Brownies.

Flour, 1½ cups
Salt, ½ teaspoon
Cinnamon, ¼ teaspoon
Eggs, 2
Shortening, ¾ cup
Sugar, ⅔ cup
Milk, ¾ cup
Chocolate, unsweetened, 2 squares, melted

Sift flour, measure, add salt and cinnamon; sift again. Separate eggs. Beat egg whites until stiff but not dry; set aside. Cream shortening, add sugar gradually. Beat egg yolks and add to creamed mixture. Add milk alternately with sifted dry ingredients; blend well. Add melted chocolate and nut meats; fold in stiffly beaten egg whites. Bake about 5 minutes. Grids should be slightly cooler than for regular waffles. Hot waffle is rather limp so it may be easier to remove one half at a time. Makes 4 waffles. Dust with powdered sugar and cut in wedges. Good spread with cream cheese. May be served with fresh fruit or ice cream.

Gingerbread Waffles.

Molasses, ½ cup
Shortening, 6 tablespoons
Flour, 2 cups
Baking powder, 2 teaspoons
Baking soda, ½ teaspoon
Salt, 1 teaspoon
Ginger, 1 teaspoon
Sugar, 4 tablespoons
Eggs, 2
Milk, 1 cup

Combine molasses and shortening in saucepan and heat to boiling; cool. Sift flour, measure, add baking powder, baking soda, salt, ginger and sugar; sift again. Beat eggs well; add milk. Add sifted dry ingredients. Mix just enough to blend; add cooled shortening and molasses. Bake about 5 minutes. Grids should be slightly cooler than for regular waffles. Makes 6 waffles. Serve with whipped cream, hard sauce, banana sauce, apricot sauce or cream cheese sauce or with applesauce and bacon.

2 INSURGENT COLUMNS SPED TO NEW FRONT

(By United Press)

PERPIGNAN, French-Spanish Frontier—Spanish loyalist troops have reorganized themselves along a battle line 40 miles north of Barcelona for a last stand against the relentless drive of the nationalists, advices from Figueras said today.

It was their final hope. There seemed no doubt that defeat this time would mean disaster and the collapse of all resistance in the northeast corner of Catalonia remained to them.

Hammered for weeks in one of the most gigantic offensives of modern warfare, tangled for days in a horde of hungry, terrorized refugees who fled north from Barcelona toward the safety of France, with some of their leaders reported quarreling among themselves, the loyalists faced a task that might have awed a Napoleon.

Rear Guards Resist.

At least they had stopped. Their rear guards already had begun to fight against the Moroccan army corps of the insurgents, now some 22 miles north and northeast of Barcelona. Another nationalist army, impeded only by the difficulty of the mountainous country, was marching eastward along a long front parallel with, and only 18 miles west of the Barcelona-Vich-Ripoll-Puigcerda highway.

This army intended to cut the highway along a front extending all the way from Barcelona to the French frontier, south to north—and, in co-operation with the Moroccans who were moving northward, to squeeze the loyalists into France or into the sea.

Nationalists, admitting that the loyalists were again fighting fiercely, asserted that units of the international brigade, which stopped them at Madrid, had been reincorporated in the loyalist army and was forming its rear guard.

Dispatches from the loyalist side said that the streams of refugees were slowing down and becoming more orderly, that loyalist policemen were again in control of traffic and that the highways would be passable for motor traffic—which had been impossible for days—by tonight at the latest.

New Earth Shocks Plague Chili as Toll Nears 50,000

SANTIAGO, Chile —(U.P.)— New earth tremors were reported from the devastated Chillan area today as ministry of interior officials estimated that the total of dead in the southern Chile earthquake would reach 50,000.

Unburied dead still lay in streets and along roads. Thousands of bodies lay still in the ruins of homes, theaters, jails, churches, convents. Relief agencies sought to relieve suffering.

At 10:45 p. m., the earth began to tremble in the Chillan area, which had been hardest hit.

Authorities here estimated that 75,000 homes, 42 per cent of those in an earthquake area of 2,400 square miles, had been destroyed in the big earthquake Tuesday night.

Up and Down THE STREET

W. L. "Larry" Miller, superintendent of public schools, has joined the ranks of Bromfield admirers since the novelist's talk at graduating exercises last Friday night. Not alone for the excellent talk he gave but for a rather unusual memory. "I visited with Bromfield for half an hour or more and during that time a dozen men and women came up to him and without hesitation he called them by their first names despite the fact that he hadn't seen them since he left Mansfield—almost 25 years ago. If he were in my position, he'd probably be able to call the parents of every pupil in the school system by their first names."

Mrs. Walter L. Beckley and Mrs. George Kahl, who have returned to Mansfield from Washington where they attended the 14th Women's Patriotic conference on National Defense, had an interesting experience in the capital city. They were on a tour with Paul A. Ashbrook, nephew and secretary of Congressman William A. Ashbrook, when they happened to witness the first television broadcast ever made in the nation's capital. The broadcast was made by Speaker Bankhead, Congressman Samuel Rayburn, Congresswoman Rogers and others. Mrs. Beckley worked her camera overtime taking pictures of the history-making event.

One of Mansfield's most rabid camera fans turned model last week and "got his picture took" for the Dayton papers. Paul W. Williams, secretary of the Mansfield Chamber of Commerce who leaves here March 1 to take a similar position in Dayton, and Mrs. Williams occupied four columns on the front page of the Dayton Daily News. There was a picture of Mrs. Williams and two of Williams, one in which he was aiming his camera at the news cameraman and another at his desk.

An alibi that was unusual although truthful, was offered by an Ashlander arraigned before Judge C. H. Huston in common pleas court Saturday. He told the court that he got into trouble because he hadn't attended church regularly. "This court doesn't penalize for not attending church," the judge opined, "but we've noticed that you DO meet better company in church than at the beer joints." The man got a probation term—which may or may not make him more regular in his Sunday habits.

A former Mansfielder figured in the search for survivors of the ill-fated Pan-American clipper, Cavalier, which sank nine days ago enroute to Bermuda. He was Ray Comish, who served as an assistant to Pro Jock Collins at Westbrook Country club several years ago. Now a flight mechanic for the Pan-American company, Comish was assigned to the first plane sent out to hunt for the Cavalier.

RENEWS CHECK OF PLANE SALES

Senate Military Committee Hears Roosevelt Sought Help for France.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON — The senate military affairs committee may request today a copy of a letter allegedly written by President Roosevelt to government department heads asking cooperation with a French mission buying military planes in this country.

The committee met in secret session to continue its investigation of negotiations whereby France is purchasing the latest type American-made planes with the administration's cooperation and of circumstances surrounding the presence of a French air ministry official aboard an experimental bomber that crashed near Los Angeles last week.

The committee's meeting was the major congressional event as national defense and the administration's foreign policy became the chief issues before both houses of congress. Passage of the relief bill by the senate Saturday with the amount of the appropriation definitely settled, cleared the way for emphasis on the president's preparedness program.

Military Affairs Committee Chairman Morris Sheppard, D., Tex., summoned G. Grant Mason of the Civil Aeronautics authority, to determine whether the plane that crashed, precipitating the French purchase controversy, was intended an addition to the air force or as a commercial product.

6 BELIEVED TO HAVE ESCAPED BLAZE FOUND DEAD IN COTTAGE

(By Associated Press)

CINCINNATI—Charred rafters of a four-room cottage stood as evidence today of a fire tragedy which snuffed out the lives of a family of six at nearby Newtown.

The dead, all trapped in the flames which quickly enveloped their home early yesterday, were Everett Frost, 32, section foreman for the Norfolk and Western railroad; his wife, Gladys, 28, and their four children, Ernest, 11, Eugene, 9, Velma, 4 and Kenneth, nine months.

Coroner Frank M. Coppock, jr., after an autopsy on the bodies of the parents, said the family died of suffocation. He said he would return a verdict of accidental death today. Origin of the blaze was undetermined.

The village siren calling volunteer firemen to the scene was sounded after Mildred Mueller, a neighbor, was awakened by the cries of one of the children.

Firemen reported they believed all occupants of the home had escaped until Jerry Hard, a volunteer, called out as he was fighting the flames.

Hard said it was the body of Eugene, who was sleeping alone in the combination living and bedroom where Fire Chief Chris Binder reported the flames started. Pressing further into the inferno, firemen came upon the body of Mrs. Frost kneeling at the crib of the infant Kenneth in an adjoining room.

"Apparently she struggled to get near the child but was strangled by the smoke," Binder said.

DEWEY CHARGES $400,000 PAID BY LITIGANTS

BULLETIN

WASHINGTON—(AP)—Representative Sumners (D.-Tex.) said today he had been advised officially that Judge Martin T. Manton of the federal circuit court of appeals had resigned.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK—A double-barreled investigation was underway today into the record of Judge Martin T. Manton of the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals in the wake of charges by District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey that the high-ranking jurist had accepted more than $400,000 from litigants.

In a letter to Rep. Hatton W. Sumners, chairman of the house judiciary committee, Dewey listed six loans totaling $439,4881 which he said had been paid since 1932 to Judge Manton or corporations owned and controlled by him.

The money—most of it never repaid—was advanced by individuals or concerns acting for parties interested in matters handled by the appeals court, Dewey said.

Later Won Cases.

Four of the six transactions, he added, involved litigants whose cases before the court later were won.

"If, upon the foregoing facts, the house of representatives should assume jurisdiction of this matter," the district attorney wrote, "I am prepared to present evidence before your committee in support thereof."

The judicial committee normally intiates impeachment proceedrings against federal judges. If the house adopts its recommendation for an impeachment action, formal charges are sent to the senate, which tries the case. A two-thirds vote of the senate is required to remove from office.

An investigation by the department of justice into the affairs of Judge Manton was announced in Washington Saturday by Attorney General Frank Murphy.

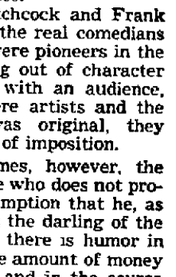
Phoney Entertainers Who Seek Advance Applause Are a Pain In the Neck



—By WESTBROOK PEGLER

NEW YORK—As one of the customers of the amusement business I here exercise my right to request that the so-called artists of the radio, the floor show and variety get out of the patrons' hair, quit begging for applause and take their chances on their ability, if any, not on the charity of those who pay to be entertained.

This is not too much to ask, for persons in other lines of work are required to deliver on the same terms, and a comedian, singer or dancer who finds himself in the market for a pair of shoes or a dozen eggs does not accept inferior goods and praise them out of pity for the merchant's ambition to succeed.

I believe it was Miss Tex Guinan who started the custom of appealing for approval for an artist before the act and of shaming those who sat tight or, to avoid a pun, stood pat, refusing to commit themselves until they had seen or heard something.

She was original, at least, and, moreover, she was a good judge of entertainment and seldom asked for a great big hand for a little girl without knowing that the little girl would live up to her billing.

* * *

Since her time, however, the breed of master of ceremonies has increased like carp in a pond and, like that slob among fish, has fouled the people's sport. The master of ceremonies pretends to something known to the profession as personality, which consists, however, of an amazing gall and self-approval and a manner of address which combines the whining and wheedling of an African beggar with the condescending moochery of an Austrian count.

He takes his stand before a metal box mounted on a pipe and tells us that the little lady who is about to appear is a well-known star of the air, stage and screen (which we know from scratch she ain't because if she were a star she would step right out and go into her stuff without any help from the likes of him) that she has just returned from a successful season in London or Hollywood (which is of no interest to us, if true) that it is a rare privilege on our part and a generous deed on hers which combine to make possible this happy occasion and, finally, that here she is herself—whereat he sets off the applause.

* * *

At this point the customer is placed in a false position. If he doesn't respond the master of ceremonies stands to lose his job, the artist risks the professional humiliation of a cold reception and the patron himself may be singled out for some impolite comment from the shill and a glare from the performer as though he were paid to applaud them.

Then, having spanked his palms in advance and put in a mood of pity and fear, the patron feels compelled to clap again at the end of a number which has bored him horribly, and thus encourage the artist to further impositions and the master of ceremonies to renewed confidence in his own magic with an audience.

Raymond Hitchcock and Frank Tinney, among the real comedians of a past day, were pioneers in the trick of stepping out of character and chumming with an audience, but as they were artists and the device then was original, they were not guilty of imposition.

In recent times, however, the comedian is rare who does not proceed on an assumption that he, as an individual, is the darling of the public and that there is humor in the recital of the amount of money that he is paid and in the source from which he bought the decrepit joke which he is about to fling in the teeth of the victim. He, too, needs pleading and build-up from a professional cadge who precedes the act, and his method is to indulge in a "do you mean to stand there and tell me"—feud with an accomplice, both men using the familiar form of address.

* * *

I claim that anyone professing to be an entertainer should be able and willing to walk out before a cold audience and go to work without the services of a missionary, and I renounce all interest in the private personalities, the business affairs and the marvelous capacity for friendship of those whom I pay to amuse me. In the vaudeville business and musical comedy they used to pretend that they were actors, persons of a make-believe world, and they kept their place and gave us an illusion and more or less fun, according to their abilities, without crawling all over us and breathing in our faces.

Audiences don't mind co-operating, but they shouldn't be asked to approach their entertainment in a mood of obligation, and, finally, if the amusement world never employs any more bands of Iggorotes to twang oddshaped banjoes and whine through their notes, that will be all right, too.

Hollywood Speaks---

—By ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD—I don't suppose Hollywood will or can take a lesson from it, but "Pygmalion" was made by doing things just about as differently from Hollywood's way as possible.

If you haven't seen "Pygmalion" you've heard about it. Around Hollywood you hear of little else. You get scenes and bits of business quoted at you, and you hear Oo's and Ah's. You hear about Wendy Hiller, the "find" in the lead of the Bernard Shaw play, his first successfully adapted to films, and about Leslie Howard, and Gabriel Pascal, the brilliant young producer who admits he's brilliant. It all adds up—"Pygmalion" is in the bag.

And "Pygmalion" hails from England, where all reports have it the film industry is in a bad way. From England, where a "dying industry" created about half the pictures that found places on critical "ten bests" of 1938!

* *

Leslie Howard is in town, probably to do Ashley Wilkes in "Gone With the Wind" while he's here, but mainly to arrange for future work on what "Pygmalion" has started for him. For a long time Howard has talked about directing movies, and with Anthony Asquith on "Pygmalion" he had his chance. He and Asquith are going on together, making pictures in England for RKO release, with Howard acting and co-directing. Pascal, Shaw-bitten, is doing more Shaw for Metro.

The scholarly Howard would be the last to hold that the British movie business is prospering. He's sure the boom, boomed too fast, was its undoing. Money lured into "quick movie profits" was lost, and became thereafter timid. It'll come back, however.

Howard believes the success of "Pygmalion" can be attributed, first of all, to its source—Mr. Shaw's play—and then to "a spirit of harmony that prevailed."

When Pascal prevailed upon the hitherto reluctant Shaw to allow one of his plays to be filmed, Howard went into the venture—like most of the others—on a percentage basis They were concerned with making the best possible picture, and they weren't frantic about it.

They went to the splendidly equipped—but otherwise deserted—new Pinewood studios at London, and they made the thing in eight weeks. Before that they had spent five months preparing it—story conferences, yes, but not in the Hollywood style. They didn't have a release date to meet, and they didn't have a wild-eyed supervisor yelling about costs.

* *

They were so pleasantly leisurely about it, in fact, that once the whole kiboodle of them packed up to St. Moritz and the snows for talk sessions, and even during production, when enthusiasm mounted highest, they'd sit up half the night working on ideas despite that they all had to be on the set, bright-eyed, in the morning.

The important thing—as Howard's humble listener sees it—is that "Pygmalion's" forces were ever eager for new ideas, discarded none such until it had been well discussed; on the other hand, they threw out as holding nothing of real value all the old cliches and timeworn devices of the screen.

Mr. Shaw, despite his reputation, proved tractable enough—on rare occasions only did he hit the ceiling at Pascal's suggestions of changes, and even then he invariably "came around."

DEATH STRIKES OUT CLEMENTS, FORMER HOME RUN KING OF OHIO LOOP.

By OSCAR RUHL, News-Journal Sports Editor.

MANSFIELD friends were shocked Saturday when they learned of the death of John (Zeke) Clements, former home run king of the Ohio State league. Clements, who played at the Fairground on many occasions as a member of the Alliance and Tiffin clubs, died at his home in Ravenna of pneumonia after an operation for appendicitis "Zeke" played wth Hutchinson, Kan., in the Western Association last year. . . . WHITE WAHLBERG

Wahlberg Asks Nolan for Match With Champion.

WHITEY WAHLBERG, the durable young Swede from Duluth, Minn., shot back into the local wrestling scene today. He demanded a match with the Great Mephisto, newly-crowned light-heavyweight champion of the world, and succeeded in getting the Quality Clubs word that the match will be made.

Wahlberg a victim of Mephisto's deadly "pile-driver" here some weeks ago has not only recovered from his injuries but claims he has developed a successful counter for the hold which brought about his downfall. He worked for three weeks to develop a bar for Mephisto's pile-driver. Wahlberg stated "and I'm positive he'll never get that one on me again."

Mephisto regained the championship in Columbus a couple of weeks ago when he defeated Billy Weidner in one of the bloodiest matches ever witnessed in Ohio. He has since defended his title successfully against Frankie Talaber, the former champ.

So certain are Quality Club officials that Mephisto will be signed that Matchmaker Tim Nolan is going ahead with plans for the contest in the Armory on Friday night. "Wahlberg has persistently demanded a return bout," Nolan stated, "and Mephisto has given me his word that he will agree to the match."

Rams Handed Second Defeat by Loudonville Cagers.

Although unbeaten in the Richland county league, Madison high's Rams are finding it difficult to continue their winning ways in non-league competition.

The Rams suffered their third non-league defeat of the season and second to Loudonville Saturday night when they bowed to the Red Birds by a 28 to 17 count.

Coach Al Fendrick's men trailed by a 9 to 4 count at the end of the first period, 12 to 10 at the half and 18 to 11 going into the final quarter. Dissatisfied with the play of his first-stringers, Fendrick sent in his reserves in the fourth quarter.

Swank, with 11 points, was high for the Red Birds. Kopcial scored six to lead Madison. Madison took the preliminary game from Loudonville, 19 to 17.

Ontario was never in any danger as Kibler used an even dozen players in the victory. Tommy Hudson was high man for the Ontarioans with 11 points. Bosh tallied the same number for the losers.

AVENGE SATURDAY LOSS

PROVIDENCE, R. I.—(INS)—The Cleveland Barons were back on top of the International-American league's western division today after smacking down the Providence Reds, 5 and 2. In winning last night the Barons got revenge on Providence for a 3-1 overtime loss in Cleveland Saturday.

Women Keglers Shoot for $10 First Prize in News-Journal Tourney.

THE first championship to be decided in The News-Journal Individual Sweepstake to open at the Meder Recreation alleys Saturday is the women's title.

As the number of feminine keglers eligible to compete in the tournament is limited, the women's division eliminations will be run off in one day.

Sunday Women's Day.

Next Sunday has been selected as Women's Day in the tournament, and the eliminations for the fair sex will be rolled off across eight alleys on the lower alleys.

Sunday was selected for the women's decision as the Meder alleys will be host to the Inter-City Goodwill tournament on the lower lanes the following weekend.

Shifts for the women bowlers will go on the boards at 2 and 4 p. m.

A $10 first prize will be awarded the winner of the feminine division by The News-Journal, with the amounts of the other prizes being determined by percentage from the prize fund.

Male bowlers will shoot for the $25 top award on two week-ends, the first shift scheduled at 3 p. m. Saturday. Men's bowling will be confined to the first eight alleys on the main floor.

A Handicap Affair.

The tournament is conducted on a handicap affair, with the winners being determined on the number of pins they roll over their average. Averages will be taken from the leagues in which the participants have bowled the most games. Traveling league averages will not be accepted as half of these games were bowled on out-of-town alleys.

The only cost to participate is $1. Twenty cents of this amount will go into the prize fund.

Winners Gain Undisputed Lead in C League.

South Main Evangelical cagers took an undisputed grip on first place in the Class C Church league at the Y. M. C. A. Saturday when they defeated St. Paul, 28 to 21.

St. Paul tied with South Main prior to Saturday, trailed all the way, being behind 16 to 4 at the half. The losers rallied in the third period, scoring 11 points to 1 for South Main, but were unable to keep up the pace in the final quarter.

St. John decisioned First Presbyterian, 13 to 8, and First M. E. won over Episcopal, 20 to 17, in the other games. The Boy Rangers won on a forfeit from Park Avenue Baptist.

By CHARLES MARTIN

THE City Class A basketball league championship race this year was divided into three rounds in the hope that at least three teams would come through with single round titles and force a playoff for the crown at the end of the season.

It looks like the idea was all right, but the City league officials didn't reckon with the defending championship Yuncker Sports quintet. The undefeated Yuncker machine, sporting a spectacular 14-game winning streak in the city's premier league, won the opening round title and is well on its way towards the second round crown.

Tangle at 8:30.

Whether the Sports annex the title will be decided tonight when they tackle the dangerous Westinghouse Electric combine in the feature game at Mansfield high at 8:30 o'clock.

Pilot George Percy's Electrics have suffered one defeat this round and must turn back the Sports if they want to share the title. The game will be preceded by a tussle between the Herrick Hi-Speeds and the Elks Lodge club.

Manager Jimmy Breres' Sports possess a fast-breaking attack and an army of sharpshooters who are practically impossible to stop. And the Westies chances of upsetting the leaders remains in their ability to halt the Sports' scoring attack.

The Sports enter the contest as favorites, but may run into more trouble than anticipated. With Fritz Vogle, George Hummel and Harry Ross leading the way, the Electrics have a team that can pull the unexpected at anytime.

After First Win.

The Elks, with a rebuilt combine, will attempt to register their initial triumph of the round against the Hi-Speeds. Herrick's team will hold a height advantage, but will have a busy evening stopping Tom Farrell and company.

The Hi-Speeds can jump into second place in the race by winning, providing the Electrics lose to the Sports.

Tygers Get Break In Tournament Pairings; Draw Bracket Opposite Sandusky, Bellevue

Takes Cupid's Third Strike

Cupid tossed a perfect third strike across the plate to Jeff Heath, 22, slugging Cleveland Indian outfielder, in Seattle, Wash., and Heath goes back to the dugout of life with the former Althea Belle Calland, 19, of Seattle, as his bride. Heath was second in the American league in batting in 1938.

But Mansfield May Find Port Clinton Cagers Tough; Lyons Gets 15 Points in Win Over Streaks.

By OSCAR RUHL

MR. J. RUSSELL MURPHY now has a pretty fair idea of what kind of competition his Tygers will encounter in the district championship games in Sandusky in March.

His Mansfield high school plank pounders faced what are regarded as two of their toughest rivals in the district eliminations during the past week, and they came through the battles with an even split.

On Tuesday, Murphy's Tygers lacked the stamina to keep pace with Bellevue's fleet-footed crew of basketeers, and were forced to settle for a 37 to 32 defeat.

But they made up for the whipping Saturday by repulsing Sandusky, 29 to 23, on the Mansfield boards in another thrill-packed melee.

There's Trouble Ahead.

However, Murphy realizes that anything but a picnic awaits his Tygers in their defense of the district championship in March.

Tuesday's game convinced Murphy that Bellevue is stronger than last year when the Tygers outpointed the Redmen in the semi-finals, and the Tyger tactition, although pleased with the performance of his proteges, figures Sandusky will be quite a factor in the tournament.

Saturday's tile was Sandusky's third of the last week, and Murphy, while admitting that his team might have won under any conditions, contends that the Blue Streaks may have been slightly tired.

It might be pointed out that Saturday's game was Mansfield's second of the week, but the Tygers had a three-day rest, while Sandusky played just the night before, trimming Fremant.

The victory over Sandusky was pleasing to Murphy and followers of the Tygers, but the Mansfield coach gained his most satisfaction from the drawings for the district play.

The Tygers received their first break in several years in the tournament drawings Saturday. Mansfield will not meet either Sandusky or Bellevue unless the Tygers advance to the finals.

Mansfield was placed in the top bracket with Port Clinton, Shelby, Williard, Norwalk and Tiffin Junior Order. The Tygers' first foe on the opening day of the tournament, March 3, is Port Clinton, and they may go as high as the finals if they can get by the lake citians, whose worst defeat was a five-point setback by Bellevue, the same margin by which Mansfield bowed to the Redmen.

Record Crowd on Hand.

But to get back to the Mansfield-Sandusky game, which drew one of the largest Saturday night crowds to pile into the Tyger lair in recent years.

Mansfield trailed only once in the tight setto, but the score was knotted six times.

The first period ended with the score tied, 7-all. The visitors held a 14 to 12 lead midway in the second quarter, but it took a pair of buckets from rebounds by Dave Shelley in the last minute of the first half to give Mansfield a 19 to 15 advantage at the intermission.

Sandusky was at the mercy of the Tygers from then on, and the winning advantage was registered in the third period, Mansfield outscoring the Blue Streaks, 8 to 2, to hold a 10-point 27 to 17 lead going into the final quarter.

The bright spot of the tussle was the scoring spree ignited by Jake Lyons, who led the Tygers with 15 points, the highest total compiled by any Mansfield player this season.

Another feature was the manner in which Shelley and Jack Dugger held Irv Barnett, Sandusky's six-foot-six center, in tow. Barnett, who averaged 14 points per game up to Saturday, was limited to one basket and a pair of free throws for a total of four points. Although practically useless on the offense, Barnett was a power on the defense, and his control of the rebounds under the Mansfield basket held the Tyger victory margin to a minimum.

Barnett Fouls Out.

Barnett left the game on fouls in the fourth period. Bryant and Balconi were also ousted on personals. Don Rose and Tommy Scott of Mansfield fouled out.

Mansfield will make their next appearance Friday night when they act as hosts to Akron West.

In the chief preliminary game Saturday, the Tygers permitted the Sandusky seconds only three baskets to win by a 17 to 10 count. The junior Tygers tallied nine points in the last period to cinch the decision, Dave Prion and Bob Atton providing most of the points.

Bellville triumphed over the No. 2 reserve team, 23 to 21, in an earlier preliminary tussle.

Derby Contest Closes Today

Former Mansfielder Sets Scoring Pace

Charley Howard Rolls 654 as He Leads Ashland Team to Victory at Meder Alleys.

CHARLEY HOWARD, a former Mansfield kegler, took the play away from the home town bowling stars at the Meder alleys over the week-end when he piled up a 654 total as heled the Ashland Times-Gazette five to a 2767 to 2735 victory over the Mansfield Printers.

Bill Fenn, rolling a 637 total, established the scoring pace for Main Office No. 1 in a postponed Mansfield Tire league match, but dropped a pair of games to the Service Store.

Shooting scores of 189, 200 and 225 for a 614 series, Mrs. Spohia Meder was high as the Meder Recreation women's team defeated the Farm Bureau men's quintet of Shelby, 2585 to 2120, in a special match.

The Appliance Finishers Old-Timers, led by Shepherd's 604, defeated the Appliance Finishers New-Timers, 2640 to 2598, and Bob Hollingsworth, with a 600, paced the Mansfield Tires to a 2732 to 2569 victory over the Liederkranz club.

The Satterlee Restaurant keglers defeated the Pepsi Colas of Mt. Vernon, 2784 to 2569, in a special match at Mt. Vernon, and the Moose No. 2 team won two games from Collinwood in a Moose Traveling league match in Collinwood.

PLAN TO HOLD PRELIM MAT MEETS ABANDONED

COLUMBUS—(UP)—A plan to hold three preliminary wrestling meets prior to the state high school mat tournament at Kent State university March 17 and 18 has been abandoned, H. R. Townsend, commissioner for the Ohio High School Athletic association, said today.

The elimination meets had been planned for Cleveland, Akron and Columbus to take care of the increased participation in high school wrestling this year. Townsend said, however, that Joe Begala, Kent State wrestling coach and director of the state scholastic tourney, had arranged the state event so that no preliminary meets will be needed.

SIX-DAY BIKE RIDERS TO INVADE CLEVELAND

CLEVELAND — The greatest array of man-powered speed demons ever to be assembled for Cleveland competition will be on the starting line Feb 1 when the most gruelling of all indoor grinds, the International Six-Day Bike race, opens in Arena. It will be Cleveland's eighth gigantic cycling classic.

Old Cleveland favorites of the steeply-banked pine-boarded bicycle track are slated to vie for supremacy. Bill "Torchy" Peden, red-headed giant from Vancouver B C, and winner of 29 six-day endurance classics, is among the entrants. So are Jules Audy and Henry LePage, French-Canadians from Montreal.

WOMEN GOLFERS MUST PAY OWN WAY, AAU RULES

CLEVELAND — (INS) — Women golfers touring the southern circuit were warned today that they must pay all their own expenses or be barred from United States Golf association matches. The warning was issued in the form of letters, written by Edward L. Cheney, of Cleveland, chairman of the U. S. G. A. amateur status committee.

Cheney said the golf association had been informed that concessions in hotel rates, as well as other violations of the amateur code had been made. If they were accepted, he said, they were taken in good faith, without intentional violation of U. S. G. A. rules.

BOB TAVENNER - GUARD

Too often the fellow who does the scoring gets more than his share of credit, but the plaudits of Ohio Wesleyan's basketball fans this winter are going to Bob Tavenner, Mt. Vernon, former Lorain high school ace, who is finishing his college cage career in a blaze of glory. Although having scored only 60 points in his team's first 12 games, Tavenner's great passwork and defensive play are helping his teammates to roll up large scores. The Bishops have made 355 points in 12 games, largely through Tavenner's work.

Baseball Secrets Already?

Baseball season still is weeks and weeks away but Bob Feller, star pitcher of the Cleveland Indians, and Rollie Hemsley, catcher of the Indians, are cooking up baseball secrets already. The two are shown at Delray, Fla., where they are wintering.

Cleveland Schools Believed Ready to Quit Conference

CLEVELAND—(U.P.)—Civil war today threatened Ohio's outstanding athletic league—the Ohio conference.

The experts said it was not a question of "if," but merely of "how long" until three members of Cleveland's classy little big four—Case, John Carroll and Baldwin-Wallace—break away from the ancient and unwieldy Ohio conference. The fourth member, Western Reserve, quit the league many years ago.

The leader of the rebels—the militant Case School of Applied Science—was one or the original members and founders of the conference more than 35 years ago.

For some time, the latter colleges have found themselves encumbered by the bulkiness of the league—which comprises 20 schools—and by restrictions which the smaller schools, by their preponderance of voting power, were able to place upon them.

The latest and most corrosive eruption appeared in the pages of the rebel publication—The Case Tech.

In a scorching editorial, the paper lashed the conference as "having outlived its usefulness" and said that Case already had standards "far above those set by the conference."

ASHLAND—(INS)—At least 95 persons will have a direct interest in Gilbert Dodds when he goes to New York to run the two-mile race in the Millrose games on Feb. 4.

The Ashland college long distance star will be able to wear the colors of his college in the meet because 95 citizens responded to a plea to contribute toward defraying expenses. About $28.05 was raised to send Dodds to the Madison Square Garden classic.

DIVERS BUSY

MOSCOW—(AP)—In 15 years of salvage operations, Soviet divers have raised 435 ships, aggregating about 800,000 tons. Many of these vessels were sunk during the civil war years. One of them, a British steamer, was said to be carrying $2,500,000 in gold to finance the White armies; but when the divers got to it the gold was gone.

STOCKS EXTEND GAINS DURING QUIET TRADING

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK—Stocks took on a recovery tinge in today's market, leaders moving up fractions to more than 2 points.

While dealings were exceptionally quiet from the start, gains were well maintained.

Steels, motors and aircrafts led the forward swing. Rails and utilities were moderately improved.

Prominent on the upturn were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, General Motors, Chrysler, Douglas Aircraft, United Aircraft, Speery, U. S. Rubber, Westinghouse, Montgomery Ward, Anaconda, American Smelting, Consolidated Edison, and Great Northern.

While many traders held to a do-nothing policy pending Hitler's speech to the reichstag today, others leaned to the buying side on the belief Europe's troubles would be ironed out successfully. Prime Minister Chamberlain's address was liked in Wall Street and it was hoped other forthcoming pronouncements might avoid sabre-rattling.

Corporate bonds advanced but U. S. governments lagged. Major commodities did better. Most foreign securities markets exhibited renewed strength.

Market analysts noted the survey of the magazine "Steel" which said that while demand in this industry was slow in gaining momentum, production was being supported by railroad and engineering construction purchasing.

Chamberlain Supports Hitler's Appeal for 'Mutual Confidence'

Premier 'Welcomes' Peace Remarks But Hastens To Tell Commons Britain Plans No Steps Immediately To Satisfy Demands for Colonies.

(By International News Service)

LONDON — Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler's expressed desire for "mutual confidence and co-operation" between Great Britain and Germany was seconded by Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain in the house of commons today.

Greeted by ironic cries of "Three cheers for Barcelona!" on his entry into the house, Chamberlain had hardly taken his seat when he was asked for an expression of opinion on Hitler's reichstag speech yesterday, in which Germany's colonial demands were coupled with a warning to the western powers not to interfere with the reich's expansion.

"His Majesty's government," the prime minister said, "welcomes the passages in Herr Hitler's speech regarding his desire for mutual confidence and co-operation between our two sovereign peoples.

"I would like to take this opportunity to repeat that these sentiments are fully shared by the government and people of this country."

Chamberlain, however, lost no time in assuring the house that Britain had no immediate intention of satisfying Germany's colonial demands by bilateral negotiations.

"No negotiations are presently contemplated between the British and German governments," he said.

Reiterates Position.

Pressed by Frederick Bellenger, laborite, as to whether such negotiations were contemplated in the "near future," Chamberlain replied in the negative.

Great Britain some weeks ago announced its statement of policy on the colonial question, namely, that it was one for discussion and settlement by the Union of South Africa and the League of Nations mandates commission, under whose jurisdiction Great Britain administers the former German colonies awarded her after the World war.

Chamberlain then went on to furnish his long-awaited account of the conversations he carried on with Premier Mussolini in Rome as part of the "appeasement policy" he launched in a desperate effort to save Europe from war.

The visit was successful, he said, for although it did not result in complete agreement, it enabled each side to gain a clearer understanding of the other's viewpoint.

Duce Pursues Peace.

"Signor Mussolini," he said, "made clear that Italy's policy is one of peace and that he would use his influence in favor of peace any time it was necessary.

"He told me that Italy desired peace from every viewpoint, not the least for the general stability of Europe. He told me that while the Rome-Berlin axis was an essential point of Italian foreign policy, he did not imply that it was impossible for Italy to have friendliest relations with other powers when circumstances were favorable.

"We did not conceal our regret that Italy's relations with France had recently deteriorated. The great barrier between France and Italy is the Spanish question. Until the civil war is over, no negotiations between the two countries are likely to be productive.

No Ambitions In Spain.

"Signor Mussolini emphasized that when the Spanish conflict is over, Italy will have nothing to ask from Spain. He said that Italy has no territorial ambitions with regard to any portion of Spanish territory.

"Although Signor Mussolini emphasized that belligerency should be granted to General Franco, he reiterated his willingness to stand by the British non-intervention plan.

"He told me he felt that the Jewish problem was an international one, and could not be solved by one state alone. We agreed to keep in touch regarding future development of the question of disarmament."

Meanwhile, all over Great Britain, as well as in government quarters, there was a tendency to extract as much comfort as possible from Hitler's address, particularly his statement of belief that Europe faces a long period of peace.

Market Picks Up.

The fact that financiers viewed the situation optimistically was reflected in heavy trading on the stock markets to the tune of constantly rising prices.

"The fact that the international situation is no more critical after Hitler has spoken must be accounted a gain."

Whitehall circles also expressed the opinion that Hitler's utterances were "not as explosive" as had been expected and that the fuehrer had advanced no new demands.

PORTS OUSTER STARTS G. O. P. JOB ALLOTING

EYE AID FOR AGED POST

Republican Chairman Named to Highway Office; Goodenough New Probate Clerk.

A series of appointments to political jobs, set off by the dismissal of Allen K. Ports as municipal court clerk late yesterday, had been made today, with additional recommendations by the Republican executive committee expected to bring about still further changes in the near future.

Municipal Judge G. E. Kalbfleisch late yesterday dismissed Ports, whose records have been under intensive scrutiny for the past month, and replaced him with Ralph A. Hughes, former secretary of the city water department.

Backed By Committee.

Kalbfreisch's dismissal of Ports came as the second of two suspension periods ran out. Hughes, also a Republican, had been endorsed by the Republican executive committee for the post.

Two other Republican appointments announced today were:

1. Ralph Hardy, deputy in Judge C. J. Anderson's probate court, appointed to a clerical post in the Division No. 3 state highway office at Ashland.

2. Walter Goodenough, former superintendent of the Mansfield Rapid Transit company, named to succeed Hardy in probate court.

Effective Tomorrow.

The changes will be effective Wednesday. Hardy, who has been a court deputy here for six years, was appointed by State Highway Director Robert Beightler on the recommendattion of Murray D. Shaffer, division engineer. Goodenough was named by Judge Anderson.

Hardy has been chairman of the county Republican executive committee since last August and before that was head of the county central committee. Before his appointment to the probate court job six years ago, he was clerk of the board of county commissioners for four years under a Republican administration.

The Republican executive committee last night endorsed James Warrick, Mansfield, for appointment as manager of the county office of the division of aid for aged.

While no change in administration of the county office has been ordered by Gov. John W. Bricker, it is expected that a Republican will be named in a few days to replace M. W. Conley, the present manager. Appointment of a new manager probably would bring a change of the office personnel of five employees. Floyd P. Down-

PORTS INQUIRY IN FIFTH WEEK

Examiner Says Audit of Court Records Will Need 'at Least' Another Week.

The state inquiry in the municipal court accounts of Allen K. Ports, dismissed as clerk of the court yesterday, went into its fifth week with at least another week due to pass before any concrete evidence of alleged financial irregularities can be released.

This was revealed today by State Examiner Elmer A. Zook who said that it would take "at least" another week to complete the audit, of which Judge G. E. Kalbfleisch has asked for a special report.

Although Zook declined to comment upon his findings, it was learned that another week may see the audit completed.

Meanwhile, Ports' successor, Ralph A. Hughes, former secretary of the city water department, was on the job today in the court offices. He had not yet furnished bond, but conferred his morning with Judge Kalbfleisch on that point.

Ports was under $3,000 bond.

Judge Kalbfleisch said the Republican executive committee had recommended Hughes' appointment to the court post.

The dismissal of Ports came at the close of a two-week suspension period. It was Ports' second suspension. The judge first ordered a six-day suspension, but expended it for 14 more when Zook was unable to complete his investigation of court accounts.

For the past two weeks, Examiner Zook has been working on the court records to the exclusion of records in other offices of the city building. He has been instructed by the state auditor's office, out of which he works, to bring the audit up to date as of Jan. 10, the date on which Ports was first suspended.

FABER LOSES

Prejudice Claim Overruled by Court at Surety Hearing.

ASHLAND — Common Pleas Judge C. C. Chapman today overruled an affidavit charging prejudice filed by County Treasurer H. O. Faber in the appeal of the American Surety company and the New York Casuality company for release from surety on the bond of Faber who is under indictment for embezzlement

Asking that another judge be Guy B. Murray to replace Faber. contended that Judge Chapman formerly was an agent of the American Surety company and had asked the county commissioners to appoint Deputy Treasurer Guy B. Murray tr replace Faber.

Attorneys for the surety companies held that Faber's affidavit was not filed within the required three days preceding the hearing.

Judge Chapman said he told county commissioners that "if conditions in the treasurer's office are such that irregularities exist, the commissioners should do something about it."

BLIZZARD HOPS OVER OHIO AS IT RACES EAST

MERCURY PLUNGES HERE

While Mansfield heaved a sigh of relief at having escaped the brunt of a terrific blizzard that started in the mid-west and swept eastward with lightning rapidity, New England was digging in for a siege today.

Over the northern edge of the nation, transportation and communication systems were crippled, schools were closed and at least 50 were dead.

Light Snow Here.

Northern and parts of central Ohio were snowbound, but Mansfield had escaped with no more serious consequences than a sharp drop in temperature and a light snow.

Yesterday afternoon, while a driving snowstorm held Ohio cities less than 100 miles from Mansfield in its grip, this city enjoyed a temperature of 46, with a warm sun shining.

During the night, however, the mercury plunged 35 degrees to a reading of 11, and a light snow fell. At noon today, the temperature stood at 20. The total snowfall here was a half inch.

Skips Cleveland.

The blizzard, which first hit Chicago yesterday morning, followed a freakish path. It descended in full fury on Toledo and nearby towns, dropped a sleet storm in Lorain, left Cleveland practically untouched, and was next heard from in western New York, heading eastward. It left Buffalo unscathed, but struck eastern New York and New England with renewed fury.

CHICAGO—An 18.9-inch snowfall in one day, traffic demoralized, 36 injured in elevated train crashes, caused by poor visibility, plane travel halted. Eleven deaths, most of them due to over-exertion, were reported in Chicago and its suburbs Five deaths were reported in Indiana, sections of which were as hard hit as Chicago, and three died in Michigan.

OHIO—Five inches of snow in Toledo, Lucas county schools closed; 80 fishing shacks at Put-in-Bay swept away by high winds;

DEWEY SCORES

Court Admits Testimony of Dead Man in Racket Case.

NEW YORK —(INS)— District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey scored a signal victory today at the retrial of Tammany district leader James J. Hines when the trial judge ruled that testimony adverse to the defendant given at the first trial by a confessed racketeer now in a suicide's grave may be read to the jury at the present trial.

George Weinberg had been billed as star prosecution witness for Dewey who is seeking to link Hines as political protector to the Dutch Schultz mob during its ruthless reign over the lucrative Harlem policy racket.

Weinberg, however, blew out his brains Sunday and, until the ruling today, there had been considerable doubt whether Weinberg's testimony would reach the present jury.

First Jobless Insurance Paid, Checks Due Here Next Week

With the first unemployment benefit check paid in Columbus today, payments in the Mansfield district are not expected to be received until next week, Maurice K. Wells, manager of the Ohio Unemployment Compensation commission office here said.

Ohio's No. 1 unemployment benefit check—totaling $11.50—went to Stanley C. Fox, 52-year-old unemployed Columbus sheet metal worker.

"I'd rather have a job but the check will come in handy," dispatches quoted Fox as saying. He said his wife had been ill recently and that he had been caring for their eight-year-old son.

Meanwhile Wells said that eligible applicants for unemployment benefits had failed to measure up to expectations in the Mansfield district, resulting in only 950 applications here since the office was opened Jan. 2.

"The fact that Mansfield industry has taken up the slack in unemployment in the past three months has resulted in a drop in an estimate made after a survey

BURNS ASSESED FINE OF $8,000

(By International News Service)

NEW YORK—Comedian George Burns, who recently pleaded guilty to smuggling charges, today was given a suspended prison sentence of a year and a day and fined $8,000.

In suspending the prison sentence, Federal Judge Bondy placed Burns on probation for a year and a day. The judge explained that the screen comic's "co-operation" merited the leniency.

Burns was given 10 days in which to pay his fine which is in addition to $9,770 in customs penalties. He has also surrendered to the government agents, the jewelry which he purchased for Gracie Allen and which allegedly was smuggled into the United States for him by Albert Chaperau.

BERLIN: Peace Hope Buoyed By Hitler's Policy On Colonies

(By Associated Press)

BERLIN—Diplomats saw hope today for peace in Europe through the assurance of Adolf Hitler that there would be no cause for war in his pursuit of the great Nazi objective, return of war-lost colonies.

They were not sure, however, of the full meaning of the chancellor's firm promise of aid to Italy if she were warred against in an ideological war and his declaration:

"National Socialist Germany and Fascist Italy are strong enough to safeguard peace against everyone; and to end resolutely and successfully any conflict which irresponsible elements lightly start."

Charting the course of Nazidom for 1939 in a two-hour and 17-minute speech before the reichstag last night, the chancellor declared his own belief in a "long peace."

He set increasing world trade, to include Latin American countries, as a pressing need to bolster German economy while the campaign for colonies is carried on, and advised the United States not to interfere.

Devoting much of the address starting his seventh year in power to the economic need for Germany's 80,000,000 persons, the chancellor hinted that the colonial issue would be handled by negotiation.

"Germany has no territorial demands against England and France apart from that for the return of our colonies," he said.

"While the solution of this question would contribute greatly to the pacification of the world, it is in no sense a problem which could cause war."

WASHINGTON: Greater Trade Rivarly With Germany Seen

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON—Increased German competition with the United States for South American trade was expected by federal officials today to result from Adolf Hitler's reichstag speech.

Commercial experts disputed Hitler's contention that Nazi trade relations with Latin-American nations were no concern of the United States. They pointed out that Germany's trade was on a barter and artificial currency basis, and declared this in general had the effect of diminishing the total of international trade.

They contended also that Germany's foreign trade, being controlled by the Nazi government, was a means of exerting political influence and therefore could not help but be of concern to the United States in this hemisphere.

State department officials made no public comment on Hitler's address, which contained more references to the United States than he had made in previous speeches.

The belief was widespread in diplomatic and other official circles, however, that relations between Germany and the United States might continue to be strained for some time. There is at present no prospect that the German and American ambassadors,
